Urge Feeding of Game in Winter.

Extensive preparations to feed wild game during the winter months has been started by the Game Commission. A State-wide appeal to farmers and sportsmen's organizations has been sent out.

In all sections of the State, according to Seth Gordon, Commission secretary, farmers have promised to provide an acre or more of standing buckwheat or else to provide several shocks of corn for the shelter and feeding of small game when the snow covers the ground.

Feeding will be carried on without any expense to the game fund in most cases, but provisions have been made organizations, Scouts and individuals.

The appeal cites the fact that one bad winter would make scarce the abundant supply of quail now in Pennsylvania. There are about 40,000 birds in the State now.
