TAILORS HERE SAY PRINCE HAD NO INFLUENCE ON STYLES.

"Sartorially speaking, the recent visit of the Prince of Wales was a flivver," said one of Philadelphia's leading tailors recently.

And a similar opinion was expressed by other tailors and men's outfit-

"The Prince's visit was a great disappointment to many," continued the tailor. "His pictures show him wearing only two sack suits, a double-breasted stripe and a single-breasted plaid. He wore virtually only one style of hat. And in all that he showed his good taste. He didn't try to be a fop. But he might as well have stayed on the other side so far as his influence on dress was concern-

"Such things don't affect the tailors one bit, anyway. They have no set style, but create individuality. That is not true of the ready-made stores, which must create styles to sell them. "In the future the American public can look to America and not to England to set the styles. America is so far ahead there is no comparison. Today the American people are thinking more about personal appearance and are paying more attention to clothes than ever before.

"Where the English lead is that they are always particularly well groomed for that very moment. Also they produce the finest clothes in the world. But the American people are rapidly coming to pay more attention to dressing for the occasion." Other tailors and buyers for large houses said that all the clothes the Prince affected had been popular in this country a long time. The doublebreaster coat, the straight unbroken line, and the blue shirt were mentioned as examples.

"Some of the interest in these styles "Some of the interest in these styles might be attributed to the Prince's visit, but very little," said one large buyer. "Seeing him here may have more bearing on spring styles which will be made up in about a month."

"The Prince's visit here has done some good in increasing sales," said another huver "Anything is good another buyer. "Anything is good that awakens the people's interest in clothes and gets them thinking about their personal appearance. On the other hand, the American people don't like to ape anyone and I think few persons would buy certain clothes merely because the Prince of Wales or any one else was wearing that style."

The same man went on to speak of the recent awakened interest men display toward their dress.

"They are not nearly so conservative," he said. "They are wearing tweeds and stripes and colors. The variety of styles and colors has been brought about largely by golf and the use of sport clothes. It isn't because of what some person happens to be

So, summing it all up, the most these men, whose business it is to know what the men are wearing, will grant H. R. H. is that he showed good judgment in choosing styles already being worn by well-dressed Americans and that he had more things to occupy his time than being a display for fall and winter modes.

Western Lettuce Industry.

Science and desire have worked out a curious industrial development in the west—the growing of head lettuce for all the year delivery. Three years ago the Granby district in Colorado, 8,000 feet elevation, was only a cattle station in a sagebrush sea; today they have 1,000 acres of head lettuce, ready to feed the city millions. The Idaho sagebrush country is producing head lettuce; the fertile North Idaho logged-off lands; the irrigated lands of Eastern Washington; and up in Montana they are growing trainloads of the green stuff.

Lettuce is "good for what ails you," the doctors say; it has vitamines and iron and no end of strengthening elements that mankind ought to want to eat. Wth the development of a re-frigerated car system so that it can be delivered safely even through the winter, it is coming almost instantly to be one of the staple foods of the United States.

Practically every highway has its Bell lines for furnishing service to the rural dwellers, and for connecting cities and towns with Long Distance wires. Hundreds of men are constantly watching and testing these wires.

Thirteen new Bell Telephone buildings are being completed in 1924. Eight others were started and will be combuildings were finished.

THE handling of your own calls, perhaps L the ten or a dozen made each day from your residence telephone, seems to you to present no great problem. "One telephone, one pair of wires, and an operator to do the switching!"

Multiply that telephone by nine hundred thousand. Multiply that pair of wires by 910,000 other pairs. Multiply that operator by 12,000 other operators. Add 468 buildings, 6,000 switchboard positions, 3,400,000 miles of underground and aerial plant, and 11,000 construction and maintenance men, engineers, accountants and clericals-and you have the recipe for furnishing Pennsylvania's telephone service.

But volume is not the all-important element. Nor the fact that it is a twenty-four-hour-a-day job, seven days a week. Complication presents the big difficulty.

Each subscriber at any second may call any one of the thousands of telephones in his exchange, or any of the 900,000 elsewhere in the state, or beyond. His every call comes without advance notice. 900,000 "talk tracks" must be open for him at all times, regardless of distance and without detour or delay.

It's a big job.
