"UNBROKEN FAITH"

These words should be familiar to the citizens of Pennsylvania for in that State we find them cut in everlasting stone.

The historic milestone cover that appeared on the December 11 issue of The Youth's Companion is from a painting done for this use by the eminent American painter of historic subjects, Arthur Beecher.

The text that accompanies the picture runs as follows:

Enter the elm that he thereby made historic, William Penn concluded his great treaty with the Indians. That compact, though they had not sworn to it, his followers sedulously kept, and by it, to the red men of Pennsylvania, Quaker blood became inviolate. It is by the proud right of truth that the monument of today bears the words "Unbroken Faith."

The publisher of The Youth's Companion most respectfully dedicated this important cover to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

—When you see it in the "Watchman" you know it's true.
