

The Mystery Car to Race at Altoona.

Now the racing world has its mystery car. Declared to be the most sensational model in years, and costing above $30,000, it is the posthumous child of daring Jimmie Murphy. He had it designed and partly built before his life was torn out in the fatal crash last fall on the slow Syracuse dirt track. Officials preparing the Altoona speedway for the great speed classic on June 13 predict its speed at 140 miles an hour or faster. Only meager details of its freakish construction have come east as it is daily undergoing intensive block and other tests in a guarded automotive laboratory at Hollywood. Its peculiar design even lower than the costly speed creations used by Tommy Milton and Billy Hill in their repeated shattering of world's records, will crouch almost flat on the track, with only a little more than an inch between the bottom of the roaring engine and the timbers of the huge saucer.

Seating just the driver, it appears as a grim projectile, thundering around the dizzy turns. With its radiator and long, narrow hood bullet-shaped, the slender tail a perfect stream-line, and only the goggled eyes of the pilot peeping over the cowl, it is pictured as a golden dragon, spitting fire and smoke as it hurls through space.

The slim chassis of toughest special steel houses one of the most powerful eight-cylinder motors ever designed, built with watch-like precision. Its cylinders are scarcely wider than a woman's hand, with connecting rods no larger than a stout lead pencil. Phenomenal speeds are prophesied for it when, tuned to the high atmosphere here and piloted by one of the greatest drivers of the world, it roars around the giant bowl in the fastest speed duel of motordom.

Even the name of the driver isn't known yet except that Milton, Hill, DePalma and Bordino, the "Mad Mullah" of Italy, are talked in the racing circles. There is also gossip that Milton, who is wealthy, will buy it as his personal car. Winning the season's first event on Washington's Birthday at Culver City, California, his intimates declare that this year will mark his supreme effort to win the coveted championship.
