Booklet to Memory of Dr. Sparks.

To commemorate the late Dr. Edwin Erle Sparks, president of The Pennsylvania State College from 1908 to 1920, the college has just published a memorial booklet of about fifty pages. It contains a biographical sketch of Dr. Sparks, his educational ideals and administrative policies in articles which he wrote himself. There is also a chapter on his death and funeral services and the eulogy of president John M. Thomas is contained in full. From the scores of resolutions and appreciations received by the family, the faculty committee which compiled the book selected a dozen which in themselves reveal the character of Dr. Sparks and the great esteem which his friends and associates held for him. The booklet is being sold at fifty cents a copy by the Carnegie library at State College, part of the proceeds going to the Sparks American History library collection which students recently started with contributions amounting to over $5,000.

Penn State to Start Freshman Week Ahead.

In order that new students might have an opportunity to get settled, know their instructors and department heads and receive vocational guidance from them, members of the next freshman class at The Pennsylvania State College will be asked to go to the college a week in advance of the opening date, September 23. The occasion will be known as "Freshman week" and there will be a regular schedule of meetings and classes at which the new students will be instructed in the entire operation of the college, its activities, history and traditions.

The Altoona Races Drawing Near.

Earl Cooper, the grand old man of the roaring road, battler with the famous Ralph DePalma for the hard luck championship of the world's great courses, and originator of the unique spinach diet for speed kings hardening themselves for great motor classics, was formally entered for the 250-mile championship to be held on the renowned Altoona speedway on June 13th.

Twice within the last year has Cooper been within a shadow of winning great races. Driving a spectacular contest last Memorial day at Indianapolis, spurring into the lead early in the grueling long grind, victory was in his hand until almost the finish. Two tires, ripped and shredded by his punishing velocity, forced him to his pit. Joe Boyer, whose tragic death here last Labor day will never be forgotten by racing fans, hurled his car first to the checkered flag. Earl came second.

Again at the opening last October of the great oval of the South at Charlotte, N. C., Cooper flirted with the hard luck daughter of Dame Fortune. There, after one of the most thrilling races of the sport, he was even acclaimed victor until the following day, when the expert timers and scorers, of the A. A. A. contest board gave Tommy Milton first place and Earl again second.

Twice holder of the coveted national championship crown, posthumously won by gallant Jimmy Murphy last season, Cooper is regarded one of the most dangerous contenders this year for the supreme honor. It is known that his special built eight cylinder racer will be equipped with a super-charger when he arrives at Altoona for the fastest classic of the season.

As a master of dietetics, Earl took his place in the limelight last season when his friendly enemies, the other great drivers of the world, discovered he had consulted leading specialists of the country, uncovering spinach as the food that would overcome the most dreaded sickness of the pilots, nervous indigestion. This ailment, similar to sea sickness, attacks many of the knights of the roaring boards because of the intensive vibration and drumming of the thundering cars on the courses.

Lime and Phosphate Improve Thin Pasture.

Pasture, too, can be improved. Experiences in other parts of the State find duplication in Centre county. Last spring George Orr, of Marion Center, Indiana county, co-operated with the Indiana county farm bureau in a pasture improvement demonstration. One ton of limestone and 300 pounds of acid phosphate were harrowed in on an acre of thin hillside pasture. A mixture of grass and clover seed was then sown. A favorable season assisted in replacing a poor mossy sod with a beautiful green stand of clover and grass which will furnish more and better pasture.

So much pleased was Mr. Orr with the results says J. B. R. Dickey, extension agronomist of The Pennsylvania State College, that he treated the remainder of the field in a similar manner early this spring. By keeping the livestock off until it is well started he should have a pasture hard to excel.

About two hundred tons of limestone were used in Indiana county last spring for similar pasture improvement demonstrations. Wherever given a good chance the results are satisfactory and the farmers are pleased. Where the treatment was applied and the seed not harrowed in early in the spring, the catch of clover is generally poor, and it may take years for the effect to show. This is especially true where the poverty grass is very thick and heavy. In such cases plowing may be necessary, but where the sod is thin and where the harrowing is done early and thoroughly harrowing is preferable to plowing.

Great Attractions for Lewistown's Old Home Week.

Lewistown, the metropolis of the beautiful Juniata valley, will celebrate her Old Home week, starting Sunday, June 28, and ending Saturday, July 4.

There will be a change of program every day. Sunday there will be open air sacred concerts and special services in all churches. Monday will witness the civic and commercial parade. Tuesday will be sight-seeing trips, baseball games and street dancing. Wednesday will be firemen's day with a parade including all fire departments of Central Pennsylvania. Thursday will be fraternal day with 75 lodges in line. Friday will be industrial day with thousands of men and women on parade showing their lines of trade, also a complete exhibit of the products that are manufactured and shipped to all parts of the world from Lewistown. Saturday, July 4, will be military day with thousands of Uncle Sam's fighters on parade showing the past and present defence forces of the nation and also a sham battle.

In addition there will be an historical pageant showing the growth of Lewistown from a frontier trading post of 1752 to the present time, given on Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday evenings a cast of 600. Elaborate fireworks will be featured Thursday and Saturday nights and band concerts by eight bands will be given each day in selected parts of the city.

Peter Manning, 1:56 1/2, world's champion trotter and Sanardo, 1:59 1/2, world's champion pacer, both of whom made their records when driven by "Pop" Geers, will be the features in a racing program at the fair grounds Thursday.
