SEATTLE NOW A MEMORY OF THE KNIGHTS TEMPLAR.

Touring Yellowstone Park, Costs Money, Writes Geo. T. Bush.

(By Airmail to the "Watchman.")
Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 14.
Editor of the "Watchman."

Seattle, Wash., is now but a memory to the many Knights Templar who visited it for the annual convocation, but it will linger fondly in the minds of all because of the wonderful hospitality displayed and the fact that the people of that city did not raise prices above normal in entertaining the visitors.

The trip over the mountains and across the plains of western Washington was uneventful, but will be remembered because of the magnificent scenery and the wonderful pear, peach and apple orchards of the Yakima valley. The valley has been made fertile by extensive irrigation and the trees in the miles of orchards are all heavily laden with fruit. Pickers and packers were already at work gathering the crops. The wheat crop on what is termed the dry lands is the best in five years. The growers were in the midst of harvesting the crop and on one large farm I saw thirty-eight horses hitched in a harvesting machine. These machines are ponderous affairs, cutting, threshing and bagging the wheat as it goes, dropping the bags to one side to be collected by trailing wagons. The crop averages from 24 to 30 bushels to the acre. Some tractors are used in harvesting but most farmers prefer horses.

Spokane is one of the marvel cities of the Northwest. In the past twenty-five years it has grown from a city of 35,000 to one of 150,000 inhabitants. It is built on a succession of rocky hills but is noted for its beautiful homes. It is the business center of western Washington. Enormous power plants abound within the city limits, plants which generate 130,000 horse power, which is distributed over a radius of 200 miles. Both light and power are low in cost. The city has wide, paved streets, well lighted, 34 bridges, more than forty parks and playgrounds and an efficient inter-urban system. It has hotels that are equal to any in the United States, but their prices are most reasonable.

From Spokane to Gardiner, the north entrance to the Yellowstone park, is a twenty-four hour ride. Yellowstone has for years been noted as the biggest and most wonderful playground in the United States but all its wonders are tabulated in a guide book and I will not dwell on them. The only "best way" to see the park is to tour it in one's own automobile. To take the regular tour of the transportation company which enjoys the park privilege requires four days and costs $25.00 for transportation, $29.50 for hotels and $20.50 for camps. The big drawback is that one is compelled to devote an entire day at Mammoth Hot Springs, when several hours would suffice for most travelers. The transportation company has 380 large White company motor cars and busses in service, notwithstanding the fact that they had 134 destroyed in a big fire last winter.

The grand canyon of the Yellowstone is more picturesque than the one in Arizona, though not nearly so large. On my final day in the park I saw a number of deer and bear, none of which were at all timid over the proximity of travelers. The bear are ordinarily too familiar. Following parties in the hope of getting something to eat. Many people have been hurt by teasing them. One woman had her hand almost severed by the bite of a bear and the ranger shot the animal to avoid any possibility of it becoming dangerous. In the park I met Mrs. C. B. Williams and son Frederick, of Westfield, N. J., but formerly of Bellefonte, who were taking in the park on their way home from a trip to the Pacific coast.

A slight earthquake was felt at Gardiner and also at Livingston last week, but no damage resulted. Thirty-six hours after leaving the park I reached the twin cities, Minneapolis and St. Paul. There I met several people who were fellow passengers on my trip around the world, as well as a few people from Centre county. One of the latter was George Wagner, a former Bellefonte boy, now a traveling man, whose territory stretches from Minneapolis to Seattle and down south to Los Angeles. He is doing well and likes the west very much.

I also met Walter Heirs, a moving picture star who with his charming wife is spending his vacation in Minneapolis. In his early years as an actor Mr. Heirs was with the Lubon people and was one of the bunch at the Phillipsburg train wreck picture. I spent several days with him. Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Dahl were among others I met. Mrs. Dahl will be remembered by Bellefonte people as Miss Helen Moore prior to her marriage.

Looking over the cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis one is led to wonder why they do not unite under one banner, and thus become the leading city of the west. It would mean a city of over one million inhabitants, and both have much in common. A building boom is on in both cities. Henry Ford has built a branch assembling plant in Minneapolis which employs two thousand people. He bought a lock dam from the government in connection with the ground on which his plant stands. Many large eastern manufacturers and wholesale houses have branches here and find them very profitable.

Will leave on Monday for Duluth, catching the Canadian boat for a trip over the Great Lakes to Detroit, Mich., thence to Toronto, Canada, for the big exposition and fair.

Arrangements Progressing for Grange Fair and Encampment.

Two weeks more of earnest work and planning to make of the annual Grange encampment and fair the successful event of the year in Centre county. Each member of the committee is making use of every means in his power to insure a satisfactory exhibition and one that shows some signs of progress. The management will have everything in readiness for the big opening, Saturday, August 29th.

The extension to the auditorium stage is completed and will be found a big improvement in giving more space. Repairs and a general cleaning up will be apparent on Grange park.

Several new features in sanitary arrangement have been added and more garbage cans purchased. Water has been piped to the stock barns and the stables improved.

The tent list is about completed and every tent will be occupied. The management regrets the impossibility of satisfying every one who wants a tent.

It is the wish of the committee to not admit campers until Thursday, August 27th. Tent rates remain $6.00 and $7.00, according to size. Campers are urged to take oil stoves. Oil can be purchased on the grounds; also, straw by those desiring it. At camper's request, electric light placed in tent.

The concession department promises to fill more space than ever with clean amusement and wholesome supplies.

The machinery and automobile exhibit will be of wider scope and more diversified type than usual. Many kinds of farm machinery and makes of automobiles and tractors will be on exhibition. Heating and lighting plants, water systems, and many other improvements and conveniences for homes and farms will be shown.

The breeders of pure bred stock will fill stables and barns with the best the country affords.

The poultry show will have some unique features. More entries than ever in the history of the fair.

Watch for the premium book for information.

Two wings of the exhibit building will be reserved for the exhibition of products of the farm, garden and orchard, and cash prizes will be paid those whose products excel.

The west wing is reserved for home economics and modern needle-work. The east wing for vocational schools and extension department.

Speakers of State and National prominence will be present on Wednesday and Thursday. On Wednesday the Centre County Veteran club will hold its reunion. Thursday, Grange day. Hon. P. H. Dewey, Master of Penna. State Grange, will be there.

The plays to be given in the auditorium will be far above the average in merit. A small admission will be charged. Good bands will furnish plenty of music, giving free entertainments.

All trains will stop at Grange park the entire week. Special trains, on Thursday, September 3rd. Fifty cents admission, good for week. Under 14 years, admission free. 50 cents for auto parking, good for week.

Any further information can be secured from secretary.

Big Ku Klux Klan Meeting.

Halfmoon Hill was the scene of a big Ku Klux meeting on Saturday night, it being designated as ladies night. Some one hundred and fifty or more white robed members were present and two fiery crosses were burned. Quite a number of spectators were on the side lines and the best of order prevailed throughout the meeting. One of the speakers was Rev. J. A. Mills, of the United Brethren church.

—R. P. Snyder, "Doc" Miller and "Preacher" Bingham, three young men working their way through college by canvassing for the Pictorial Review, arrived in Bellefonte yesterday and during the week will call on the ladies of Bellefonte in the interest of their work.

—A big bunch of revenue men and plain clothes enforcement officers were in Bellefonte last week for several days, but as no arrests were made it is presumed they found the town a pretty dry place.

—Clouds of mosquitoes caused the fire department to be called out at Erie. The "varmints" are able to make it hot where they are numerous.
