Texas Hero Deserves High Place in History

Some years ago, near the city of Hempstead, in Texas, lived a farmer who proved himself to be a real hero and whose name has always been remembered by the people of his county with all the gratitude they might have willingly bestowed upon a hero in the military forces.

Now, one of the great rivers of Texas is the Brazos, a stream subject to vast floods, which often rise so suddenly that the people living near it have no time to escape the rush of the waters.

In early times a colony of Franciscan friars established a mission on a mound near the bank of the river. They built a church and a village and taught the neighboring Indians. A hostile tribe, however, swept over the country, ravaging and burning, and there seemed no chance for the friars and their converts behind the feeble defenses of their mound. But of a sudden the waters of the river rose, and terrible floods swept the savages and saved the little garrison.

Then the friars, so the story goes, saw plainly the working of the Lord, and they called the river which had enveloped them Los Brazos de Dios—The Arms of God.

But the Brazos is not always merciful. During the floods in Texas from time to time its waters have played a mighty part in the destruction of life and property. One night, as a flood was beginning to overspread the farming lands, a young man named Fritz McGee was awakened by the distant roar. He rose, hurried out, and after some difficulty, secured a single frail rowboat and started alone on the work of rescue.

All through the terrible night he worked among the negro cabins scattered over the flooded bottoms, and before morning he had rescued 75 human beings, men, women and children, and had conveyed them to high and safe ground.

It is doubtful whether a single man ever before saved so many lives, one by one, in so short a time. McGee, farmhand, rowing his fragile skiff through the darkness over the turbulent waters, is a figure to stir the noblest feelings.

New Arctic Expedition

An Arctic expedition largely undertaken by Oxford university, England, is about to start on an exploration of north Eastland, a large island, 90 miles square, which lies to the northeast of Spitzbergen. Two previous attempts have been made to explore it. The first in 1875 was by the Norwegian Nordenskiold, and was only partly successful. A German expedition in 1912 perished in the attempt. A specially designed seaplane will be used. It will have a closed cabin, carry a collapsible boat, and be equipped with floats so designed that landing may be made on the ice. The plane will be provisioned for five weeks. The main equipment of the expedition will be carried in two vessels, one a 300-ton Norwegian whaler, the other a small Norwegian sealing sloop. The expedition will be led by George Binney, leader of last year's Oxford expedition.

Analyze Flowing Gas

Determination of the amount of carbon dioxide gas in the flue gases from blast furnaces is an important method of furnace control, but it has always been a difficult job to get samples of the hot gases for analysis. A German firm has now invented a method of using electricity to make continuous analyses of the flowing gas. Different gases have differing powers of heat transmission. Electrically heated wires are passed through an air chamber and through one filled with flue gases. Electrical resistance of the wires changes with the temperature, and since the relative heat losses measure the amount of carbon dioxide in the flue gas, that percentage can be easily measured by determination of the electrical resistance.

Fast Learners Remember

Fast learners are slow forgetters, according to Prof. Harvey A. Paterson of the Illinois State Normal school, who adds that fast learners learn more than slow learners and retain it longer. He further says that a student good in one subject should be better in another than a poor student. Professor Thorndike of Columbia university, noted psychologist, backs up this opinion by stating that a good general would be a better poet than a poor general if he turned his thoughts to it.

An American tourist in northern Scandinavia got tired of eating fish and spying some American brand sausages in the market, took some to his stopping place and asked the native cook to fry them just like fish.

Returning in the evening expectantly, he went to the kitchen to ask how the sausages were coming. "Just fine," answered the cook. "Only it isn't much left after Ay take the insides out."

Education Calls and Pays.

Farm papers everywhere are running stories about agricultural education and how it pays. The Pennsylvania State College has room for some more qualified freshmen in the agricultural courses. Does your boy crave an agricultural education? Don't disappoint him.

AARONSBURG.

Mrs. Walter Orwig and two sons, Kennit and David, spent the weekend as guests of Mr. Orwig's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Orwig, of Hartleton.

H. C. Stricker, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Bressler and children, of Burnham, and Mrs. John Wilcox and children, of Millheim, spent Sunday at the Stricker home.

Harry Vonada has returned to his home in Bellefonte to be present at the opening of school. Harry spent the summer in this place with his grandfather, J. H. Crouse.

Lynn Haffley and Russell Sylvius, of Akron, Ohio, arrived in this place during the past week. While here they are guests of Mrs. Jennie Sylvius, sister of Mr. Haffley, and mother of Russell Sylvius.

Rev. John S. Hollenback, the former pastor of the Reformed charge here, will preach in the local church on Sunday evening, September 6th, at 7:30 o'clock. Every one is extended a cordial invitation to attend.

Sunday guests at the George E. Stover home were Mr. Stover's sister, Mrs. Davis, formerly Miss Emma Stover, of Niagara Falls; Mr. and Mrs. Showers, of Lock Haven; J. W. Beaver and family, of Pottsgrove.

Rev. and Mrs. John S. Hollenback and son Jack, of Manchester, Md., are circulating among former parishioners and friends in this locality. Rev. Hollenback left here to accept his present pastorate, since which time the Reformed charge here has been without a pastor. Their many friends are much pleased to again see them. While in town they are guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Weaver.

Dr. Jordan Deshler, of Glidden, Iowa, spent a day in town, recently.

MEDICAL.

All Worn Out?

So Was Mr. Cowher, Who Tells His Experience.

Are you tired all the time; worn out night and day? Does your back ache as if it would break? Do you suffer dizziness, headaches, rheumatic twinges or distressing urinary disorders? You have good cause, then, to be alarmed about your kidneys. Do as many of your townfolk recommend. Use Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. This Bellefonte case is convincing: H. D. Cowher, Prop. of clothing store, S. Allegheny St., says: "After a cold, my kidneys bothered me and I was annoyed with a constant, dull pain in my back. When I stooped, a catch took me across my kidneys and it was only with difficulty I could straighten. My kidneys were sluggish and the secretions didn't pass often enough. It didn't take much to make me feel tired and worn out. I bought Doan's Pills at the Mott Drug Co. and they fixed me up in good shape."

calling on old friends. Dr. Deshler was formerly of this place and a number of years ago went west, but returned east from time to time to visit his parents, Dr. and Mrs. Deshler, who passed away many years ago. However many the years since he left here he returns to find many warm friends who are glad to meet him once more.

Seed Wheat.

Unless your wheat crop was considerably above the average for your community you might be interested in getting a better strain or variety, particularly if it was infested with disease. Look into this matter now and if new seed seems desirable do not wait until seeding time to secure it.
