The good daughter makes a good wife, and even if she has servants at her command after marriage, the knowledge gained while with her mother will enable her to so conduct her husband's household that it will be a constant delight to him.

Men are made and unmade by their wives, but the influence of the latter, in the main, is for the highest good. More men have found their way to success by reason of having the right sort of wife than have suffered because of having been unfortunate in the selection of a "better-half," and while men may not know it, they are indebted in a greater way than they can ever repay to the women who cheerfully and uncomplainingly bear, not only their own burdens, but many of those of their husband as well.

Nearly all men can make money, but very few can save it, and here is where the good wife comes to the rescue. Honest men of experience know this to be a fact, but are loath to admit it.

When you have guests, in giving a dinner, for instance, care and judgment should be exercised in choosing, and then in arranging, the guests so that all may be comfortable. Not too many should be bidden; six, eight and twelve are desirable numbers, and four are often an abundance. The reason for even numbers is the fact that, in a mixed party, it is well to have as many men as ladies. The conversation will be prevented from degenerating into long or heated discussions, and it is also well to invite the young as well as those of advanced years for such an occasion. Large parties may be made enjoyable, but where there are more than eight at table conversation is not entirely agreeable; guests often shout to each other and exhibit annoyance when they cannot make themselves heard.

Can Vegetables for Winter.

How many vegetables have been canned for use during the winter? ### A Drop of Gin.

A very deaf old lady was plaintiff in an action for damages in connection with a street accident. The judge, finding the case tedious, suggested a compromise, and asked the plaintiff's counsel to inquire what she would take to settle the case.

"His lordship wants to know what you will take," roared the learned counsel into the old lady's ear. A smile spread over her face as she replied: "I am very much obliged to His Lordship. I think I would like a drop of gin."
