UPRISING THRILLS

IN CHINA LAND. ience on Way to the Hills.

Szechman, China, July 8. Dear Home Folks:

On Friday morning, July 3rd, I left home to go up on the Hills. We were planning to have a good time on the Fourth and to celebrate our anniversary in some little way. When I crossed the river the kids in swimming all hooted me, but although I thought it a little strange that they should say so much, I didn't pay much attention to them, for we are used to being hooted by the kids on the streets. As the boat started across the river a Chinese in soldier's uniform eyed me rather keenly and asked me where I lived, etc. He also asked me something about Lung Men Hao-"Dragon Gate Firm," a place across the river. I didn't know what he meant, and so said I didn't know. Wnen I reached the other side of the river, a carrier asked me, "What is your honorable country?" I paid no attention to him. He shouted it after me again. I replied, "America." He shouted back, "Din Hao," which means "tip top." When I reached McCurdy's bungalow, I found out what all these things meant.

Ever since the Shanghai riots the British have been in disfavor here, as elsewhere. No distinction is made between the home-land and the dominions—all are "Yin gwei," which means England. Students have been lecturing on the streets about the Shanghai trouble, and have taken opportunity to express themselves unequivocally about the English. Finally things became so hot that the English vice consul ordered the British to the Hills, thinking they would be safer there. But the students were not to be silenced so easily, nor foiled in their attempts at revenge. They followed the British to the Hills and finally succeeded in forcing their servants to strike.

Following this a mob gathered one day at the godown—that is, store-house—of Mackenzie & Co., a British firm. Finally the sailors from the British gunboat were called for. They took a position guarding the godown, and attempted to force the crowd back. In this procedure a Chinesesome say three Chinese—was wounded with a bayonet rather badly. So far as I know he is still living. But of course this aroused the Chinese, especially the students, still more. Matters took so serious an aspect that the British vice consul ordered all British down to the river. As they had no servants, they had to go, taking only what they could carry. I got up on the hills just after they had many years and would have gone on jury but Reed sustained several lac-

I went around with McCurdy to lock up and nail up the houses, but the thieves were already at work. As fast as we could nail up a place they came along and broke it open. It was a heartless task. We carried as much as possible to our homes to save it, but we, of course, didn't get a tithe of what was in the houses. The people who suffered most were those who live all the time in the Hills. Among them was Betty Heller Peake, although the last report I had was that her home had not been badly looted. two fellows in one house-one inside getting the loot, the other outside receiving it. And they had left behind in the house a typewriter, a phonograph, a set of valuable surgical instruments, enormous personally can make use of.

I found soldiers in two other houses. They had, of course, gone there to see that everything was all right, and had found thieves at work. They just through driving the thieves with General Nuan Dsi Min, the biggest crook in the military game here in Szechwan. He is himself a native of Kweichow. The hope of the situation lies in General Wang Fang Dseo, the man in charge of the policing of Chungking. He has taken a dents to lecture on the streets, or to incite to disturbance. It is reported that he has already arrested and beat-en some students. Whether this will cool off their ardor, or will lead to further trouble remains to be seen.
