

Seaplane Crew Rescued After Being Afloat Nine Days.

Commander John Rodgers and his intrepid crew of four of the lost trans-Pacific airplane PN-9 No. 1 are alive and well.

The crippled eagle with its precious burden of trial-blazing adventurers was found late Thursday riding swan-like atop choppy seas by a monster of the deep, the United States submarine R-4.

Lost 21 1/2 hours in a plunge from the air after twenty-five hours hurtling from San Francisco towards Honolulu in the first such flight ever attempted, the brave little force in every sense except officially had been given up as lost martyrs to man's efforts to overcome the elements.

The PN-9 No. 1 was found fifteen miles off the island of Kauai, sixty-four miles northwest of Oahu, upon which is Honolulu and toward which the aircraft was headed.

After her wings were clipped by the exhaustion of her gasoline supply the plane, wind driven on the face of the water, made progress slower than calculations of the searching Navy forces had indicated.

It was sighted at a position over which the flotilla of naval craft had cruised almost a week previous, near that in which the mine sweeper Whippoorwill reported two days after the search it had seen a white flare and two red rockets.

The five men came through their ordeal in remarkably good shape. Some traces of the tension under which they had lived for ten days were apparent, but physicians who examined them were confident that rest and quiet would bring complete recovery.

For that reason the aviators were directed to go at once to the navy hospital at Pearl Harbor.

Under Commander Rodgers' direction were: Lieutenant Byron J. Connell, of Pittsburgh, assistant pilot; Skiles N. Pope, of Jackson, Tenn., as aviation pilot; William H. Bowlin, of Richmond, Ind., aviation chief machinist's mate, and Otis G. Stanz, of Terre Haute, Ind., chief radio man.

New Ideas in Mental Tests for Children.

In some of the elementary English schools, today, mental tests are made, and gauged by the quickness shown in solving certain problems presented pictorially. One test, known as the Porteus maze, measures temperament as well as mind. Eleven mazes, graded progressively in difficulty, are printed on separate sheets, and the pupil is told that they show the paths in a garden surrounded by walls. He must find his way out by the quickest route. The showing made depends on the pupil's ability to work under pressure and to withstand distraction by essentials in the material or by noises in the room. A cube imitation test involves the touching of four numbered cubes in a certain sequence as indicated by the teacher, the combinations of numbers being made more and more difficult. Each test gives a certain score, and by combining the scores the mental age of the pupil is arrived at. Single tests are of no value. The tests of London boys and girls between the ages of eight and thirteen showed some interesting sex differences. The girls excelled in memory tests and the boys in reasoning.

Old Age Reverenced Among Eskimo Tribes

Old people are held in great respect among the Eskimos, and their counsel is always considered. They help as far as they are able in the household work, the old men repairing weapons, harness, etc., and the old women in sewing and tending the lamps.

In times of scarcity, as in winter, meat and oil are always shared around. Directly a seal or deer is brought in it is cut up and sent to each needy family. In times of plenty each family is supposed to provide for itself, but old people, widows and orphans have always the first claim upon those who have the means.

Among these people mutual kindness is a general obligation. A widow or orphan child is never left alone, but taken into the house and family circle of the nearest relative. The widow gives her services in return for food and lodging and clothing, and the child is cared for exactly as the man's own offspring.

Costly Cherries

"Yesterday," says a staff writer in the London Daily News, "I heard a true story concerning an American girl whose father left her at a well-known London hotel while he made a round of business calls on the Continent."

"Papa, on his return, had a rude shock. The first item on the bill was for 178 cocktails. 'But my daughter never touches alcohol,' he expostulated with the manager. Then the girl herself was called in. With a shy glance, first at the manager and then at her father, she remarked, 'I ordered them just to eat of the cherries, father.'"

"And each of those 274 cherry-bearing cocktails cost 18 pence (36 cents)."

Fruit Salad for Dogs

That investigating food specialist and lover of animals, Andrew Kennard of Boston, reports he has raised a litter of imported puppies on a diet of fruit, the puppies making a record-breaking growth as they were fed daily their portions of fruit salad, an appealing combination of oranges, apples and bananas. The fruits were half their daily rations, the other half being approved dog foods.
