

Why the Academy was Defeated.

Bellefonte Academy was defeated by the Syracuse Freshmen at Syracuse last Saturday by the score of 6-0. The defeat was not altogether unexpected because coach Snively had witnessed the Syracuse lads' victory over Cortland, N. Y. Normal on Saturday, October 3rd, the week before and came home with the report that they were a classy bunch this year, an equal match for the Academy in weight and experience and considerably further advanced in development than his own proteges. The Syracuse boys won the game on the merits of their team work. A few pointers, however, can be given to satisfy the loyal fans of the Academy that the local team was not disgraced.

A muddy field generally proves advantageous to the home team. The mud and wind made a successful passing game such as Hood plays impossible. Syracuse made a lucky short pass after three minutes of play which resulted in the only score of the game. Players of either side found tackling runners a hard proposition because of the slimy field. Williams made a forty yard run in the second half but never called his play again. In the last three minutes Hood shot a long pass down the field and Whitmore was set to receive it back of the goal line when Sankovic, not seeing Whitmore tried to get it, only to spoil the pass for Whitmore, and lose a touchdown for the Academy.

The game was valuable in showing Coach Snively who his four best backfield men are, and in proving to the players that they are not unbeatable. This fact will cause the team to work harder and more unitedly in the remaining hard games to be played. They did not play the game of which they were capable, but due allowance must be made because of the unfavorable weather conditions.

Bellefonte High School Wins Another.

In a driving, stinging gale that had its origin somewhere in the region of the north pole, Millheim lost a game of football to the local lads last Saturday by the score of 26 to 0. Numb hands were the direct cause of several fumbles and poor handling of the ball and a high wind made kicking and passing a matter of chance. There were opportunities aplenty for either side to recover loose balls and snare wandering passes, but many of these went unheeded. On several occasions the spectators were uncertain whether they were watching a football game or a game of soccer. The Red and White played the most consistent football but they lost chances to score more points because of fumbles or lack of punch at the critical moment. Coach Riden's team was crippled through the absence of nearly one-third of his squad who were with the State troop. The combinations he had worked together were broken up and this naturally affected the smoothness of his machine. The huskies from Millheim were playing the game every minute, trying to smash through the line and waiting for the break to come which the weather seemed to promise. Their attack was often smothered before it got started and their forward passes were generally thrown to the world at large. They had the heavier team but were not as well schooled in the fundamentals of the game as their opponents. Waite scored two touchdowns for Bellefonte, while Best and Moerschbacher each scored one. B. H. S. scored once in each quarter.

Bellefonte vs. Tyrone.

After a lapse of two years Bellefonte and Tyrone will again resume athletic relations this Saturday, when the latter's football team will attempt to down the local High school eleven. Two years ago Tyrone handed the Red and White its only defeat of that season and the sting still remains. This is the first hard game on the B. H. S. schedule and a victory will mean a lot to the team. Coach Riden has been working his boys hard this week in preparation for the game. With the return of the troop, the squad is once more at its full strength. The combinations that have worked together all season were broken up for a week and it has been necessary to readjust them.

Tyrone is confident of repeating its victory and expects to do so by a bigger score than the last game. Bellefonte will have a team on the field that will fight every minute. It will be a real test for the Red and Whites, for if the boys can establish a defense that will stop the fast Tyrone backs they are assured of a commendable record during the present gridiron season. The remainder of the schedule which includes Altoona, Yeagerstown, Jersey Shore, Huntingdon, Juniata and Johnstown, is the hardest in years that a local eleven has been called upon to face. The game will be played at Hughes field and will start at 2:30. Go out and give your school some support.

Bucknell to Play Here This Afternoon.

Bellefonte Academy will line up against the strong Bucknell Freshmen team at Hughes field, this (Friday) afternoon, October 16th, at 3 p. m. The defeat at Syracuse revealed to coach Snively the strongest combination he can place upon the field this year to maintain the football reputation the Academy enjoys. Go out and see what a fine machine the new arrangement will make. Gaudet, who has been the mainstay and the point winner of the reserves in both games they have played, will, doubtless, be seen on the Academy Varsity lineup for the rest of the year. He is a Massachusetts boy and came here with a wonderful reputation as a back field man.

Admission to this (Friday's) game will be fifty cents. Don't miss it. There will be but one more game played at home this year—that with the Altoona Apprentices, on Saturday, November 21st.

It must be remembered that all opponents are scouting Bellefonte this year and are making it very hard to spring the surprises that Bellefonte did last year.

Three Types of Trees Removed in Thinning.

Nearly every Centre county woodlot has trees in it which should be cut, besides those already dead. A green or living tree which should be removed does much more to interfere with the annual growth of timber in the woodlot than the dead one. A dead tree should be removed in order that the wood in it can be kept from decaying, but its removal does not stimulate the growth of others near it. The first trees to be removed in thinning are those which have wide spreading crowns and short scrubby trunks. These trees shade many times their share of the woodlot and crowd out the young seedlings which will make real timber in the future. It is a wise move when you cannot use such trees for fuel or for marketable product, to simply kill them by girdling and let them fall by decay. A dead tree never injures the growth of others near it.

The second class of trees to be cut includes those with defective trunks, where the agencies of decay will affect the annual growth. Rotten wood is never usable for any purpose.

Inherently slow growing trees compose the third group which should be removed. Some of them are dogwood, beech, yellow birch, rock oak, and on some dry sites, white oak. These trees fall down when it comes to producing wood in volume. However, where nothing else but these are on the ground, leave the straightest and tallest specimens.

Where trees are growing up in dense stands and are beginning to die out because of extensive competition, it is a good practice to thin them so that the crowns will have three or four feet of clearance; take out the misshapen, the defective and the slower growing species in order to liberate those that are left.

By following the above directions the woodlot owner will get a return immediately in either fuel wood or marketable timber, and will improve rather than injure his future timber returns. C. R. Bashore, of Bethel community, Berks county, has averaged not less than $50 net per acre for the wood he has cut in improving his stand. The growth in many cases can be doubled, which means that marketable timber of better quality can be produced in much less time. It is possible to produce at least one cord of wood per acre each year by thinning as suggested.

Discard Old Ewes; Save Young Ones for Breeding.

With grade ewes scarce in number and high in price many Centre county sheepmen are tempted to take a chance on carrying the old ewes through the winter and getting lambs from them next year.

Our better shepherds feel that this is an expensive gamble. They choose the wiser course of letting the old, light-shearing broken-mouthed ewes go to the butcher and replacing them with a few of their best ewes.

There is strong temptation in many quarters to market the ewes and try to weather with the old flock. The time has been reached in the fleece wool country, when the only way the sheep population can be maintained or increased is by saving ewe lambs because the range men are not shipping good, young breeding ewes on the eastern market in any large number.

Let us cull grade flocks this month before turning in the rams. We can hardly afford to carry over the old ewes that will never live to see April 1, 1926.
