SIXTY-NINTH ANNUAL

The enrollment officers were as busy as bumblebees on Monday morning checking up the list and collecting the dues from the three hundred and more school teachers coming to tachers' institute held in the court house and the high school building.

The first session at 1:30 o'clock on Monday afternoon was opened by 'singing "Onward Christian Soldiers." Rev. J. A. Mills led in prayer after which assistant county superintendent H. C. Rothrock, who presided, urged all teachers to gather as closely as possible in the front of the court room. He then introduced Dr. John Harrington Cox, of the University of West Virginia, whose subject was "Skylarks and Poppy Fields."

Dr. Evans continued his talk of Tuesday stating that to teach emotion and expression in reading go from the near to the remote. Teach the known then the unknown. The child will easily pass from simple reading Right here it might be said that the to the masterpieces of literature.

Dr. Cox talked on story telling. He advocated telling stories and not reading them. Not falsehoods, but some of the greatest truths in the world. The impression created on the child will be far greater if stories are told him than when read out of the most profound book.

At Wednesday afternoon's session Dr. Cox told of a trip to England while talking on the subject of lions and guinea pigs.
