SHOOTING FOR BEEF FRONTIER PASTIME

Remarkable Marksmanship of Backwoodsman

"Squirrel-barking," "driving the nail" and "shooting for beef" were among the most popular shooting pastimes among the early frontiersmen living on the border line of civilization in old "Kaintuck" and Ohio, Arthur Woodward, writing in Adventure Magazine, tells us.

In squirrel-barking the marksman selected the bit of bark underneath the animal, as it rested on trunk or branch of a tree, and endeavored to hit the bark at such an angle that it would kill the squirrel by the shivering of the bark and concussion, rather than a direct hit.

Driving the nail was the usual means of testing the marksmanship of a man on the border. To do this an ordinary nail was hammered into a tree for about two-thirds its length.

A fair shot was one that struck alongside the nail, a good shot one that bent it, but the man who hit the nail plumb center was considered an excellent marksman.

When the appointed day came around all of the marksmen in the neighborhood gathered at the designated spot and a subscription paper was passed around stating that "Mr. So and So offers a beef worth twenty dollars to be shot for, at twenty-five cents a shot."

The winning shot won the hide and tallow which was considered the first choice. The next highest got his choice of the two hind quarters.

Educator Tells of Remarkable Feat of Memory.

A western editor, college professor and publicist, speaking of remarkable memories that he had observed, says: "I've known some good memories."

"I've known some good memories. One was that of a western congressman who knows fifty thousand people in his home state and can recall every meeting with every man. I have heard Blind Tom and Blind Boone, musical prodigies who could reproduce the most difficult composition played in their hearing."
