The sudden death of Lunger Wian has cast a gloom over Pleasant Gap, as he had many warm and admiring friends in this locality. In fact, the vicinity of the Gap is where he spent his boyhood days; hence the shock of his untimely death to many of us was very distressing. When the good and very distressing. When the good, and those in whom the heart has rested with idolized fondness die the memory of their good deeds like the moon-beams on the stormy sea, lights up our darkened hearts and lends to the surrounding gloom a beauty so sad, so sweet, that we would not, if we could, dispel the darkness that envi-rons them. It is their god and the god of their families. Their sons are growing up to worship it, and an equally baneful reliance upon it for the future; they are rushing into expenses which the divided property of their father's house will not enable them to sustain. It is written that "they that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare and into many fooltation and a snare and into many fool-ish and hurtful lusts which drown men in destruction and perdition." Withering Comment on Result of World War

The Recorder sat in a tower on the wall of the Eternal city and thumbed an ancient book. The book contained the record of man's achievements.

The entries were surprisingly few. On the first yellow page were two words; "Fire discovered." The second entry, obviously made many centuries later, was equally terse: "The wheel discovered." It was evident that the Recorder took no notice of trifles and made entries only on those rare occasions when men took a step forward.

liberty to win safety, and another to mark the beginning of democracy. The discovery of printing received three lines. The Recorder thumbed the pages of his book and yawned. And even as he yawned there was a great stir on the earth below and a war was in progress. Nations girded themselves for the conflict and young men marched in countless millions. Guns bellowed, gases crept along the ground, mighty ships were shattered. Orators denounced the evil that had been let loose in the world; idealists pictured a world free from human nature; valient men died without whimpering because their cause seemed just. Cities were destroyed; children starved; fields lay idle.

And when the orgy of killing was over, men gathered up the shattered remains of the civilization they had been so long in building, taxed themselves to pay for their follies and wrote their memoirs.

The world was dotted with new graves; new prejudices formed. The maimed hobbled on every street. The Recorder, leaning on a window sill, had watched the commotion with some show of eagerness. Apparently he had hopes. But when the world had returned to its accustomed way he yawned and closed his book. A messenger appeared at the door with a question.

College and Cathedral

Christ church, the largest and most notable of Oxford (Eng.) colleges, is in the fifth century of its existence. For reasons of convenience the celebration already had been held, so the true birthday anniversary of this curious institution, which is both a college and a cathedral and yet is called a church, passed quietly during the long vacation. Modern investigation has revealed a remarkable continuity in the history of English ecclesiastical foundations. The Saxons built their churches on the ruins of the great Roman temples, and the Normans in their turn rebuilt the Saxon churches.

This continuity is most remarkable in Oxford, where nearly every college has grown out of a medieval monas-

Centenary of Match

The match recently had its one hundredth birthday, having been introduced in 1825 by John Walker, an Englishman, who conceived the idea of selling his matches in boxes at 1 shilling 4 pence a box. The safety match, called "Swedish," did not appear until the year 1892. This was the first match which could be lit only when struck on the box.

The idea of the match, however, antedated Walker by nearly two centuries. As early as 1680 Godfrey Hawkwitz was using phosphorus to ignite little wooden sticks, dipped in sulphur. Various experiments were made by other scientists of the day, but it was not until 1825 that the match emerged from the laboratory and was placed on the market.

Long-Buried Tree Rolla Fallon, employed at the Glena

Ayr mine, near Terre Haute, Ind., was digging coal with a pick 200 feet below the surface and more than a quarter of a mile back in the mine, late in March, when he struck a substance that was firmly embedded in the coal. He picked at it until a piece, more than one foot long fell out, disclosing a well-developed tree trunk with limb formations still intact. The whole tree appears to be in the coal. He took the wood to Terre Haute and will send it to the state museum at Indianapolis for further scientific research. The wood cozes water and is spongy instead of petrified, as would be supposed. The find is attracting considerable attention from miners.

Hunters, Save the Woods.

With the hunting season approach-ng, the Forest Service, United States Department of Agriculture, issued an appeal to all sportsmen to guard against forest fires.

Ordinarily, say forest officials, a great number of devastating forest fires are caused each fall by hunters. These fires not only destroy valuable timber but also the better forms of game animals, and thereby defeat the plans of the hunters themselves. Those whose duty it is to guard forest lands from fire are usually apprehensive of the fall hunting season. From bitter experience these men have learned that hunters are frequently careless with matches, smoking tobacco, and camp fires. A great many sportsman's according to the season of the seas many sportsmen's associations have for years taken measures to prevent this carelessness by their members. Other clubs and organizations are fol-

In fact, the time is rapidly approaching when hunters everywhere will seek the woods with full knowledge of forest fire conditions, and these hunters will be of invaluable assistance in protecting the country's forests rather than being the agencies through which so many fires are

Stop that Backache

Many Bellefonte Folks Have Found the Way.

Is a dull, nerve-racking backache wearing you out? Do you feel older and slower than you should? Are you tired, weak and nervous; find it impossible to be happy, or enjoy the good times around you? Then there's something wrong and likely it's your kidneys. Why not get at the cause? Use Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. Your neighbors recommend Doan's. Read what this Bellefonte resident says:

Clark Carson, taxi owner, 355 E. Bishop St., says: "A steady misery across my kidneys took away my comfort. The ache in the small of my back was worse at night and I couldn't enjoy much rest. I had to get up many times to pass the secretions because my kidneys were weak. I was more tired mornings than when "Tell him," said the Recorder, "that I went to bed and I felt out of sorts nothing has happened."—Baltimore all the time. After using two boxes of Doan's Pills from Runkle's drug store, I was cured of the attack."
