

CAJUN CLINGS TO HIS OLD CUSTOMS

Modern Ways Make Little Appeal to Him.

The Cajun of southwestern Louisiana has his own particular customs, some of them handed down by his Nova Scotian ancestors, others of more modern invention, says Nevil Henshaw in Adventure Magazine.

Often, in naming his numerous children, he will stick to a single letter. Thus, in a family that has chosen the letter O, the boys may be: Odell, Oliver, Octave, Orville, Optah, Otis, Otto; the girls: Octavia, Odella, Ophelia, Odile, Olive, Olita, Olympia, Omeah. This system, though pleasantly alliterative, must result sometimes in confusion.

As inevitable as his cup of black coffee is the Cajun's use of brick dust. This, pounded small, is scattered inside, and especially upon that self-like portion of his home which, however small, he calls a gallery. In its way it is ornamental, the dull red of the dust standing out against the dark weathered gray of the unpainted plank behind.

In the better class families the French proprieties are observed. Religious duties are seldom neglected. Saturday night balls, which last through until daybreak, are ended by the dancers attending mass in a body. Children are instructed fully in the principles of their faith with, sometimes, curious results.

I know of one boy who, having fallen continually in his catechism class, was the despair of the kindly priest who taught him. In the end the good father resolved on a desperate measure.

"See, Toto," said he. "You have not passed, you will never pass. Yet you are a good boy and work hard. So I will give you your chance. One question now, an easy one, and you go through. On what day was the birth of our Lord?"

As he thought Toto's face was expressionless. He answered with marked uncertainty, "Good Friday."

The priest was patient. It was necessary to be so.

"Come," he pleaded. "Consider my question. It is a great day, one that we celebrate always."

At this a change came over Toto. His face flushed, his eyes glowed. Triumphant he came out with it:

"Ah, mon pere, I know now. It is Mardi Gras."

Heavy Mountain Work

At El Milargo, 4,000 feet above sea level in a very lonely part of the cloud-covered Cordo Merida mountains of Venezuela, one of the most unusual hydro-electric generating stations in the world. All of the equipment of the station, which supplies electricity to the Venezuelan city of Valencia, had to be specially designed so that it might be transported in sections on the backs of pack mules. Also with concrete and other supplies likewise brought to El Milargo by trains of pack mules the engineers in charge of this project have built a 2,000,000-gallon water storage reservoir and a concrete canal which diverts the water to the hydro-electric plant.

Famous English Park

Hyde park is a famous pleasure ground in London, a mile and a half long and three-fourths of a mile wide, extending westward from Piccadilly to Kensington gardens and covering an area of 300 acres. It was formerly the ancient manor of Hyde, belonging to the abbey of Westminster, and was laid out as a park and enclosed in 1535, in the reign of Henry VIII. In Elizabeth's time, stags were still hunted there, and under Charles II it was used for horse racing. The "serpentine," an artificial sheet of water, was introduced by Queen Caroline, wife of George II—Kansas City Star.

Transvaal's Gold Output

The gold output of the Transvaal gold mines during May amounted to 813,249 fine ounces, valued at $3,456,308. As compared with the April totals, the increase in quantity was 25,730 ounces, and in value $109,352. Native employed in the mines at the end of May numbered 172,982, as compared with 176,188 at the end of April. A bill embodying the findings of the De Villiers wage award, granting a 30 per cent increase to men now on a basis of less than $1 a day has passed the house of assembly.—Commerce Reports.

Roses in Southwest

Most curious are the wild roses of the dry Southwest. They are low-stunted bushes of brown branches and many straight brown or white prickles, more like a gooseberry bush. The fruit is all prickles like the prickly gooseberry of our swamps, says Nature Magazine. The flowers are purple, rose or white, solitary, more like a strawberry bloom than of a rose. As the bushes are built for heat rather than for frost, they are not easy to grow in northern gardens, though they will live and bloom.

Oldest Cigar Store?

Lancaster, Pa., claims the distinction of having the oldest cigar store in America. It has been in the Demuth family since 1770 and today is operated by Henry Demuth. The store is a museum for treasured relics, among them, the first bathtub in Lancaster county, more than a century old. It is built of wood, much after the fashion of a modern barrel.

Pennsylvania Near the Top.

From the Pennsylvania Farmer.

The last crop report of the U. S. Department of Agriculture shows Pennsylvania to be second in number of bushels of potatoes. Maine leads with a crop estimated at 30,976,000 bushels with an average yield per acre of 242 bushels. Pennsylvania produced 23,314,000 bushels, the average yield per acre being 121 bushels, the highest ever produced in this State. Aside from Maine only four other States beat Pennsylvania in yield per acre and they are all west of the Rocky mountains. Last year Pennsylvania stood sixth in total production and ninth in yield per acre.
