Adams County Murderer Electrocuted on Monday Morning.

Philip A. Hartman, a veteran of the world war who on the afternoon of October 14th, 1924, held up the cashier of the Abbottstown state bank in Adams county, compelled him to hand over all the money in sight, $1,561, and later shot and killed state trooper Francis L. Haley, was electrocuted at the Rockview penitentiary on Monday morning. Before going to the chair Hartman admitted the killing and stated that he had pulled off the robbery single-handed and alone and was solely responsible for the murder of the state trooper.

Brought to Rockview on Saturday by sheriff John C. Shealer, of Adams county, the condemned man was accompanied by Edgar Hildebrand, a third year student at Gettysburg theological seminary, who spent most of Sunday with him as his spiritual adviser. Mr. Hildebrand and the prison chaplain, Rev. C. E. Kalb, accompanied Hartman to the death chair. He Lebanon county, for burial.

Hartman was born and raised at Annville and was twenty-six years old. During the world war he served in a hospital unit and saw service over seas. Returning home he married and had apparently settled down to a life of industry until the spring of 1924 when he quit his job as a telephone lineman and went to Ohio where he entered upon a life of crime. When he became a suspect he stole an automobile and made his way to New York State where he had the car licensed in his own name. Then he came into Pennsylvania and a few days later pulled off the robbery of the Abbottstown bank with the subsequent murder of trooper Haley. After shooting the trooper he continued into the mountains of Franklin county where he abandoned his car after setting it on fire. Two days later he surrendered to the authorities in Reading. He was tried and convicted in the Adams county court in January and was sentenced to die in May. The original date for his electrocution was fixed for November 2nd, but his case was carried to the board of pardons and he was granted a respite to November 30th. Hartman is the third man from Adams county to go to the electric chair, the other two being in 1921, and is the 151st man to be electrocuted in Pennsylvania.

According to one account thirtynine out of fifty-eight box cars were completely wrecked. The engine of the runaway train had been completely turned around facing the west, from which direction it had come, and was lying on its side, its wheels high in the air. The coal tender was on its back, and was lying some distance from the locomotive.

Three wrecking crews were requisitioned to clear up the wreck but it was 2:45 o'clock before one track could be opened to permit of the passage of passenger trains.

Your inquiry as to how promptly the "Watchman" is delivered to sub-scribers in this place has been received and I regret to have to say that the mail congestion here is so great that deliveries of newspapers, especially, distribution of papers. The congestion is awful. It is not conceit at all that prompts me to say that if it had not been for me very few papers would have been read here during the summer. I was off sick two weeks and not a paper could be worked while I was away. When I got back they had a truck load of them from all over the country to be worked through general delivery so I was put out in the lobby and made a second class office and have been doing my level best to get things cleaned up.
But to leave the subject of mail congestion and get to something more interesting. It does me a lot of good to hear from my Bellefonte friends and er impression of what is going on in Florida is to be had by taking the time and money and coming down to see for themselves. This place is growing very fast. In fact the whole equate to keep pace with it.

So far this has been a delightful trip for me. One that I never will forget and the position I have had this summer has enabled me to make lots of friends. One gets to know people from all over the United States and Creek; Mrs. Roy Jones, of Milesburg, many of them are very interesting in-tion you go. Along the ocean front is my favorite, for it is smooth and level as a floor and as you roll along catching occasional glimpses through the palms of white-caps rolling in and great ships sailing majestically on the horizon it seems to one who has been used to shoveling snow, heaving coal and carrying ashes that it surely must be a dream.

The climate could not be better; the nights cool and the days warm. It's what brings the northerners here and is the reason they are investing in real estate so frantically. Why, over in West Palm Beach they have six thousand real estate agents. One for every grow up while you walk square. I have a nice little bungalow down here. My cousin Curt Goss is with me and we have fine times. We had southern turkey for our Thanksgiving east-bound, became uncontrollable dinner today and while it was all that after leaving Kittanning Point, and could be desired I couldn't help thinking of dear old Bellefonte and wishing for a glass of that good water to top the eats off with.

We have quite a lot of Bellefonte and State College people here. Every day I meet some one I know. Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Musser and Miss Cooney The wreckage was piled up thirty arrived today. They stopped on their or more feet high with cargo strewn way to Miami. The McGirks live just across the street from me and Raymond Dale and family are visiting them, so when the Mussers came along we had quite a gathering from Bellefonte.

Henry Meyer-An Appreciation.

The recent death of Henry Meyer is profoundly felt not only in his birth-place, Rebersburg, and in his native Centre county, but wherever human hearts have been influenced by his perfect life.

He was my teacher; when he officiated as County Superintendent of schools I had the pleasure of accompanying him on several of his tours, visiting schools and examining applicants; I was with him on some fishing excursions, and frequently in his home was entertained in the most unconventional manner and had exceptional opportuities to become acquainted with his domestic and private life.

I can therefore appreciate the noble and beautiful traits of his character and heartily affirm that he was one of the best men that ever lived, and I do not wonder that the members of his family say unqualifiedly the best.

It is when you go fishing with a man that you find out just what his quality is. Then social restraints are relaxed and the inner nature freely unfolds itself. At such times Mr. Meyer displayed his lively sense of humor; laughed heartily at a good joke; poured out his inexhaustible supply of local history and folk lore, or threaded the intricate mazes of philosophical problems. For in his youth he had mastered the metaphysics of Sir William Hamilton (1788-1856,) and his logical mind knew how to winnow truth from error. Whatever the business in hand or the subject under discussion, you were deeply impressed by the fact that he was pure-hearted and could not descend to any vulgarity.

In his make-up the intellectual predominated over the emotional. I do not remember ever to have seen him really excited; calm was he, deliberate, quiet. Yet he was a man of deep feeling, and his family and host of friends bear witness to his strong and steadfast love and friendship. Sunshine was he in the wintry day

And in the mid-summer coolness and

He hated shams and pretensions: he was unswerving in his devotion to principles which had proven sound and had therefore deliberately espoused.

Eighty-five years he lived—a long life, full of goodness, wisdom, help-fulness—everything that goes to the making of the ideal man. And crown ing all his activities and virtues was a certain divineness which is difficult to describe but is none the less felt as a reality. It is this that constitutes the silver lining in the clouds of our sorrow and goes far in retrieving our personal loss; it is this-the best part. of every great and good man-that lives on, a spiritual value not subject to the destroying power of death. In this we glory; we cannot think of him as being buried, but as having ascended into the realm of life eternal.

"Tho' world on world in myriad ages roll Round us, each with different powers And other forms of life than ours. What know we greater than the soul?

On God and Godlike men we build our St. Louis. C. C. Z.
