

IT'S GOT TO GO NOW!

A Farewell Sale that will be the Climax to the YEAGER BANKRUPT SHOE STOCK

Sale will be going full blast, Friday and Satur. January 22-23, 1926; the remainder of this Quality Assortment of Mens, Womens and Childrens Shoes Will Go to the Bargain Block

WHY THIS STOCK MUST GO NOW is the fact that within 15 days of the opening date of this Climax Sale Mr. Wilbur Baney, the best known shoe man of this entire vicinity, will change over this old location to an Up-to-Date Shoe Store—filled to the brim with Fashion's Latest Creations of Quality Footwear for the entire family. The YEAGER BANKRUPT STOCK MUST GO FIRST. We must sell here to the walls the very last pair of the present contents. There will be no half-way measure in our efforts to accomplish the necessary results. It will be the Most Startling, Crowd-Compelling, Bargain-Giving Event ever offered heretofore. We've got to sell the shoes. We can't eat them. So, if "Low-Give-Away" prices will move a stock, this one should go out so fast that you would think it had rollers under it. It's the One Great Sale you Must Not Miss! The full prices here give you an idea of how the stock is going to be sold.

Demand for College Service on the Increase.

How demands for service by the Pennsylvania State College to the people of the State increased in the four years from 1921 to 1925 is shown in startling figures set forth in the annual report of the former president, Dr. John M. Thomas, and other college officers, copies of which are now being distributed to members of the State Legislature, other state officials, alumni and friends of the college.

It is shown that the total number of faculty members engaged in instruction, research and extension in 1921 was 575, but service demands in all three branches were such that even with limited appropriations, Penn State had to increase the entire faculty to 745 trained men and women for the work of the past year. Of this number, the instructors employed primarily in resident teaching and administration totaled 314 four years ago and there are 354 so engaged.

The number of instructors devoting their entire time to solving problems for the agricultural and industrial interests of Pennsylvania increased from 25 to 37. In 1921 there were 251 people engaged in extension work alone, but now there are 369 men and women traveling over the State or teaching night classes, giving instruction in educational matters. About half of these are working among the farm and rural community residents of 65 of the 67 counties.

—The Joneses had been through the trying ordeal of a fire.

All the neighbors gallantly turned out and gave every assistance that lay in their power, finally putting up the Joneses themselves for the night. However, things weren't so bad as they looked and the following day the Joneses found that they could return to their home.

Accordingly they did so, and having settled down, they wondered what could be done to show their appreciation of their neighbors' kindness. At last they hit upon a brilliant idea and inserted an advertisement in the local paper: It read thus:

"Mr. and Mrs. Jones wish to express thanks to their many friends and neighbors who so kindly assisted at the burning of their residence."

KEEP UP SEARCH FOR PIRATE GOLD

Another Expedition After Buccaneers' Hoard.

The dispatch of a British expedition "equipped with the latest scientific appliances" to lift pirate treasure from the island of Cocos seems to indicate that the romantic life will never lose its peculiar appeal. Whether the buccaneers ever buried any treasure or not, and whether they were stupid enough to leave it buried if they did, are questions which history has never satisfactorily answered. It has nothing to do with the persistence of those golden, those glowing legends; the spirit of the unfortunate Kidd will doubtless never be laid along the New England coasts, and people will never be convinced that anything so fascinating as pirate gold could also turn out to be wholly fictitious.

The scientific appliances, of course, may fall to turn up the expected $14,000,000, but the Britishers will at least secure the less filthy lucre of romantic adventure. The very name of Cocos island, like so many of those lovely and alluring names which still turn a chart of the West Indies into a literary experience, brings up the whole picture. Cocos, lying in a convenient isolation west of Panama, was one of the centers for the magnificent operations which followed upon Henry Morgan's demonstration that in the Pacific there were still richer ships to scuttle and cities to sack. John Masefield's account of the Seventeenth-century buccaneers devotes several chapters to the famous expedition which crossed the Isthmus of Darien, descended upon Panama, and then went on to harry the Pacific coasts of South America. It was the richest period in the buccaneering trade, the cargoes were fabulous, the daring was unbelievable, and the final proceeds sometimes almost seemed to be worth it.

One can almost see the island, sleeping in a blue sea behind a palm-fringed beach, heavy with memories of the great period. Perhaps it does not really look that way. Perhaps there is not really any gold there; and perhaps, at any rate, if one actually touched its shores the glory would fade and leave only the mosquitoes. Mr. Beebe may be an authority. But one feels that the scientific appliances are the least important part of the expedition's equipment.

Restored French Empire

The phrase, "coup-d'etat," is generally applied to the successful effort made by Louis Napoleon, December 2, 1851, to subvert the republic of France, and to establish a dictatorship in its stead. The conspiracy was planned by Napoleon, Persigny and De Morny, and carried out by C. de Maupas, minister of police, St. Arnaud and others. The legislative assembly was dissolved, universal suffrage established, and Paris was declared in a state of siege. The election of a president for a term of ten years was proposed, 83 members of the assembly were banished, and 575 persons were arrested for resistance to the coup d'etat and conveyed to Havre for transportation to Cayenne. The coup d'etat resulted in the restoration of the empire December 2, 1852.—Kansas City Star.

Make Home in Street Car

Two discarded cable cars are the home of the A. S. Brewers, in Seattle. The cable car dwelling is entered from its original side-front door, which opens into the living room, made of the combined front platforms, which are larger than those of a regular street car. Cable cars used on Seattle hills have three compartments each, front, middle and rear, with a door on either side, and windows lining both sides. In the Brewer home, the bedroom occupies the middle compartment and the bath the rear in one car, each with the original sliding doors. In the other car the dining room has the middle compartment and the kitchen the rear.
