Elder Family Gathering.—The well known Elder family had a home-coming at Tussey lodge, Point Lookout, on July 27th, near the spot where the great grandfather landed about 1840, when the old Pine Grove furnace was in full blast. Owing to the gathering being rather impromptu a number of the clan could not be gathered in, but enough were there to make of it a very happy meeting. Beating of Human Heart Recorded by Cardiograph Over Mile of Telephone Line.

Heart beats have been successfully recorded recently over a distance of one mile by the aid of telephone wires attached to a cardiograph. There is a record of a similar attempt made in England but the results were unsatisfactory and its success in the United States is believed to be the first.

The cardiograph is a delicate machine used for the purpose of obtaining the forces and intervals of heart actions. It is operated electrically and is one of the most recent inventions used by physicians in the treatment of heart trouble.

Recently a noted physician desired to obtain a record of heart beats from a patient who was too ill to be moved to the laboratory containing the cardiograph equipment. The physician approached New York Telephone Company with his problem and the company officials were quick to cooperate.

The nature of the case required immediate action and within an hour the circuit was completed between the patient's house and the laboratory containing the cardiograph. The wires were connected to the machine and the physician's assistant was sent to the patient's home with the necessary lead pads which were attached to the body.

When a few minor changes had been made in the circuit the machine was put into operation and two complete sets of heart beats were satisfactorily obtained.

Pennsylvania's Roads.

With the completion of the road program for the State of Pennsylvania for last year the State far surpassed the building program of all other States of the nation with the exception of New York and Texas.

There are now but four States in the nation with more good paved roads than Pennsylvania and they are New York, California, Texas and Indiana but it has been estimated that after the building program has been completed for this year that there will be only one or two with more.

The added improved road in Pennsylvania has added materially to the State and has been a great inducement to tourists that the result that much additional money is brought into the State. This with the advertising that has been given the State recently has been quite a benefit. There are very few States in the United States that can boast of better scenery than the Pennsylvania mountains and we find tourists coming from all sections of the country to tour the Keystone State. That in itself was one of the big features brought out in the late fight for the building of the new railroad across Pennsylvania.

We, in this section of Pennsylvania, are very fortunate in that we are situated right in the midst of the most scenic part of the State and within a radius we can have a variety of scenery that one would be forced to travel over several other States to find.

Pennsylvania is but coming into her own and more tourists annually are adding the Keystone State in their travels and it is due largely to the act that one finds good paved roads throughout the greater part of the State.—Houtzdale Citizen.

Brakes Better Than Horns.

A current joke represents an automobile speeder who had run into a skyscraper building saying with his dying breath, "I blew my horn."

Having chuckled over the whimsy, consider it in the light of daily observation. What is the function of the automobile horn? What does the average driver understand its function to be? Up to a certain point probably all persons would agree on the answer. The horn is intended to give warning of the approach of a car. It is to attract attention of those in the path of the on-coming vehicle and cause them to look to their safety.

But it is not to command them to get out of the way, though that is what many drivers regard it, if their actions are fair indications of their thought. If they get into trouble through insistence on going forward when they should have stopped they try to exculpate themselves by protesting, "I blew my horn."

The driver who does not respect the equal right of others with himself to the use of the highways is not fit to have a license to operate a motor vehicle. Sounding the horn when use of the brake is called for should be grounds for forfeiture of license.—Ex.

American Rat-Catchers for Australia.

Lord Howe Island, near the mainland of Australia, has become so overrun with rats and mice that the island food supply is endangered. The situation has grown so serious that the inhabitants appealed to the Australian government for help to fight the ever-increasing rat-and-mouse army; so the authorities arranged to import rat-catchers from America.

The California barn owl was selected for the job, it feeds almost exclusively on rats, mice, gophers, and other ground creatures generally considered pests; so it happened that recently a number of California barn owls were collected at San Diego to be sent to the pest-infested island.

The shipment of owls to Australia was a bit of interesting news to Americans, but the news-interest should not offset the warning to us, a lesson for ourselves.

It is a fact generally accepted that nature maintains her own balance when undisturbed by man. If the islanders had not killed the natural enemies of the rats and mice, they probably would not have found it necessary to import owls. We should not regard the lesson lightly. Wherever ground-squirrels, rats, mice and gophers have increased to such numbers as to cause serious damage, one sees few hawks, owls, and eagles. Why? Because of too many guns in the hands of thoughtless men and boys who are unwittingly creating a situation similar to that which is so alarm-
