Popularity of the Fern Has Not Waned.

Why are ferns popular? They bear no flowers, they show only various shades of green. They produce nothing of commercial importance to us. Why do we admire and love them so? "Nature made ferns for pure leaves" as Thoreau expressed it, and it has not been improved on as a definition.

The variety of leaf foliage is intriguing. Any one visiting greenhouses where large quantities of choice ferns are grown, like F. R. Pierson's, at Tarrytown, N. Y., comes away with some idea of the wonder of it.

The common names that have been given to various ferns are very interesting. For instance, we have the "shoestring" fern, the "rattlesnake" fern, the "adders tongue," the "climbing" fern, the "maidenhair," the "bracken," the "marsh," "walking birdsnest," "Australian," and the "sensitive" ferns. Each has a long botanical name.

If you have a sun room, or a sun porch, you can indulge your desire for ferns. If large enough, say 8 by 12 or 10 by 14 feet, you can indulge in one of the beautiful cibodium ferns. These do well in both the house or the sun room. They are light green, and many imagine they are fragile and delicate, but the facts are that they will thrive if given plenty of water, warmth and light.—Ella Grant Wilson, in the Detroit News.
