ROD La ROCQUE MARGARET De La MOTT

Story: Alan Beckwith, penniless and disheartened, bargains with Andrew North, master mind of a criminal ring, proposing that North supply him with money for a year, insure him for $1,-000,000, and then kill him and collect. North agrees with the condition that Alan marry so that North will not be directly named as beneficiary. North pursuades Beverly Vane to be Alan's wife through a hold he has over her brother. The year passes and Alan and Beverly fall in love. To buy back his life Alan tries work and fails. Then he, with Johnny Vane and Squint Scoggins a gunman, raid North's liquor warehouse and get the money from hi-jackers. They are surprised in the act by North. Alan is shot by Norths gunman but Beverly has set prohibition agents on the trail. They take North into custody, Alan recovers from his wound and all is well.

MILTON SILLS in

"Puppets"

The story of "Puppets" throbs with life and action. There is something vitally important happening every minute. It is one glorious sweep of action from beginning to end.

Sills is seen in a role that is bound to increase his fan popularity. He is cast as an Italian puppet-master, strong as iron and with a will that nothing and nobody can break. He marries a beautiful girl before she hardly gets to know him. Then inexorable fate drags him off to war. Before he departs for the front he makes a powerful vow that he will take vengeance on any man who trespasses on his rights during his ab-

DEMPSEY DETHRONED AS HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMPION.

In a Pouring Rain, Before the Largest Crowd ever Assembled for a Sporting Event Jack Loses His Crown to Gene Tunney.

After having held the heavyweight championship belt since 1919 Jack Dempsey lost it to Gene Tunney at the end of their ten round bout in the Sesqui-centennial stadium, Philadelphia, last Thursday night.

The contest was staged before 125,-000 people, the largest crowd ever gathered to witness a sporting event in any country in the world. The gate receipts exceeded $2,000,000. Rain began to fall during the progress of the first round and continued with increasing volume throughout the

It was a good fight, though absolutely devoid of thrills. There wasn't a single knockdown. Tunney staggered the champion in the first round with rights and lefts to the chin. In the fourth Dempsey caught Tunney with a terrific left that sent him to the ropes and might have scored a knockout then, but was unable to follow up his advantage. Tunney out-boxed and out-generaled the champion and his quick foot-work enabled him to keep away from the dangerous Dempsey left and dash in at will to whip over painful punches to the champion's face.

While Dempsey fought with all his old-time courage the steam wasn't there, his judgment of distance was bad and in the closing rounds his gradual slowing up showed the effects of his three year's of absence from the ring. After discovering that he was losing the fight on points he tried desperately to get in a knockout blow, and took terrible punishment for it, but all to no purpose. He was a sorry sight at the end of the bout. His right eye was entirely closed, his left nearly so, he was bleeding from the mouth and many cuts on his face, while Tunney had scarcely a mark as a result of standing for ten rounds before the champion who had been known for years as "the Killer."

Tunney won every round but two and when the judges crowned him the new heavyweight champion of the world Dempsy staggered to the middle of the ring, threw both arms about his conqueror and sincerely congratu-lated him. That was the finest thing the ex-champion did in his whole ring career. It made thousands friends who had had little admiration for him before.

The fight was a record making one in many ways. It was the first time in the history of fistiana that a heavyweight championship passed on a decision of judges.
