Few Salmon Survive Season of Spawning.

It is believed that all Pacific salmon die after they get through spawning. As the spawning season approaches these fish work their way as far as possible up streams. It is a well-known fact that some species of salmon work their way up into brooks so shallow that their backs stick out before they deposit their eggs. When they have spawned they turn over and die, leaving windrows of rotting carcasses on the shore. During this season the salmon get very thin, their eyes become sunken, their appetites grow less and less, their throats begin to narrow and their stomachs shrink until they become entirely incapacitated for receiving food and they die. This, however, holds true only of the Pacific salmon. All other salmon, it seems, do not die after spawning, but large numbers of them, especially the males, do not survive the spawning season.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Newly Developed Lights Urged for Highway Use.

Ohio may become the testing field for a system of super-highways, flood-lighted from one end of the State to another, that may eventually be adopted throughout the country.

F. G. Harrison, president of the Good Roads Federation of Ohio, has already advanced this idea before a highway conference at Columbus.

And he has the backing of specialists on lighting, as well as highway engineers.

Harrison's plan, if adopted, would entail the construction of a double-decked highway system where heavy interstate traffic demanded it, and of lighting these and all other roads in the State with a series of lights newly developed at the Nela research laboratories in Cleveland.

These lights flood the road more effectively, it is said, than any boulevard lights in use today. Their principle is already in use on the large air-mail fields, where the landing grounds are flooded by the rays from one powerful lamp.

At the same time, says Harrison, the cost of installation of this system would be comparatively cheap.

"I am told that an added cost of $700 to $1,000 a mile would cover the expense," he says.

Old Capital Customs.

Almost a century ago a doctor named Cooley undertook to issue a guide telling people how they ought to conduct themselves when in the national capital. A few of the rare volumes are still extant and offer a real glimpse of the peculiar customs in Washington in those days. Under those rules "no lady of fashion or distinction goes to either house to hear the debates without being attended by a gentleman." In some cases there was no room for the escorts, so they would have to cool their heels outside. Occasionally they became disgruntled at waiting for their ladies and went away, leaving them to get home in the best way they could. This sort of thing caused some scandal.

The guide says further that "very few of the most fashionable people are to be seen walking in the streets on Sundays, and those who attend any place of public worship go mostly in carriages." This was because Sunday was largely a holiday for the negroes, both free and slave, and the streets were given over to them, so they could display their fine clothes.—Pathfinder Magazine.

RHEUMATISM

While in France with the American Army I obtained a French prescription for the treatment of Rheumatism and Neuritis. I have given this to thousands with wonderful results. The prescription cost me nothing. I ask nothing for it. I will mail it if you will send me your address. A postal will bring it. Write today.

Faulty Elimination

Should Be Corrected—Good Elimination Is Essential to Good Health.

If you would be well, see to your elimination. Faulty kidney action permits toxic material to remain in the blood and upset the whole system. Then, one is apt to have a tired, languid feeling and, sometimes, a toxic backache or headache, and often some irregularity of secretions, such as scanty or burning passages. More and more people are acclaiming the value of Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, in this condition. For more than forty years Doan's have been winning favor the country over. Ask your neighbor!
