

NEWS ABOUT TOWN AND COUNTY.

Bellefonte had its first snow squall of the season on Monday.

County Commissioners John Speary and James Swabb have been busy this week delivering the ballots for next Tuesday's election.

Miss Pauline Minich, of Philipsburg, has accepted a clerical position in the office of the dairy husbandry department, at State College.

A marriage license was granted at Hagerstown, Md., on Monday, to Frederick J. Burke, of Boston, Mass., and Miss Betty C. White, of Bellefonte.

Practically every man and woman of the large crowd at State College on Saturday went there by automobile, and not a serious accident was reported.

The public sale of the furniture of Levi A. Miller, which was advertised to have been held at his home at Pleasant Gap tomorrow afternoon, has been postponed until Saturday, November 6.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Woche, of West New York, are receiving congratulatory on the birth of their first child, a son, who has been named John Albert. Mrs. Woche is well known here as Miss Margaret Bower.

Owing to a machine that got rantankerous at the wrong time this issue of the Watchman missed the western mail last evening and, in consequence, subscribers at all points west will understand why they will receive their paper a day late this week.

Among the winners of silver loving cups in the fourth Pennsylvania State standard production poultry show at State College, last Saturday, was Mary Zubler, of Spring Mills, for the best exhibit of white leghorns. The show, with a display of 550 birds, included 229 white leghorns.

Among the one hundred and twenty new men and women added to the State's payroll, on Monday, by appointment of Governor Pinchot at Harrisburg, was Edward Tirrell Tuten, as assistant in the store room of the Highway Department. The young man is a son of Mrs. Rebecca C. Tuten, formerly of Bellefonte but now of Harrisburg.

If you feel out of sorts these long, dark, gloomy evenings, why not go to the Scenic and watch the motion pictures? The interesting programs shown there every evening will give you good entertainment and you will forget all about the gloomy weather. The best pictures made are shown at the Scenic, and the music accompanying them is worth hearing.

The Altoona Shriners presented a splendid appearance during their brief visit in Bellefonte on Wednesday, and hundreds turned out to see their parade up street and drill in the Diamond. The Shriners were on their way to Lock Haven for a special ceremonial meeting and many of the Centre county members either joined them on their special train or went down by auto to take part in the meeting.

Paul Comfort, an eighteen year old youth living near Zerby station, in Pennsylvania, made a trip to Sunbury, last week, and saw his first street car and movie show. A Sunbury news item said the youth was simply amazed at the things he saw, and we'll venture the assertion that there is many a youth in Sunbury who would be just as much amazed were he to visit Pennsylvania and take a look over that section of the State.

Some time during Friday night a freight train struck the rear end of an Oldsmobile on the Weaver crossing above Milesburg and instead of demolishing the car shoved it head first down over the stone wall which supports the railroad and State highway. The machine landed on its nose and stood there the next morning with the rear end sticking up in the air. The machine, it was said, was occupied by two State College students, but so far as could be learned they escaped without injury.

One her way home from school, last Thursday afternoon, Jean Monsell, six year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Monsell, was struck and knocked down by a car driven by G. M. Graff, of State College. The accident happened on Allegheny street and Graff stopped his car and took the child to a physician. While suffering some bruises and shock she was not seriously injured. Graff was placed under arrest by the police and Burgess Hard P. Harris imposed a fine for fast driving on the streets.

There is one robber out in Clearfield county who, if caught, should get off with a light sentence. Last Thursday night he broke into the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Trumble, at Morrisdale, and stole two loaves of homemade bread. The pantry of the Trumble home had a nice array of cold meats, a big birthday cake baked that day for a party and many other tasty edibles, but the only thing the man took was the homemade bread. It's been so long since we have had a taste of the good, old homemade article that if we came across a loaf we'd be almost tempted to swipe it, as did the Clearfield man.

70TH ANNUAL SESSION TEACHERS INSTITUTE OF CENTRE COUNTY.

Good Attendance and Interesting Instructors Characterize the Various Meetings.

The seventieth annual session of the Centre county teachers' institute convened in the court house on Monday. The most of the 355 teachers in the county reported for registration in the morning and the first session opened at 1.30 o'clock in the afternoon with county superintendent Glenn C. Rogers presiding. Prayer was offered by Rev. C. E. Arnold, of the Bellefonte Lutheran church. With Prof. Yoder in charge the institute sang "Love Divine, All Love Excelling."

Prof. C. L. Gramley presented memorials on the death of the late county superintendent, David O. Eiters, former county superintendent Henry Meyer, and assistant superintendent M. F. Pletcher, paying a well deserved eulogy in each case.

The first speaker introduced was Dr. Martin G. Brumbaugh, former Governor of Pennsylvania and now president of Juniata College, at Huntingdon. He talked on "The Business of the School." In his talk he said that the business of the school is to set in the schools of today the things we want in the Republic of tomorrow. He referred to the problems revealed by the world war, among them the fact that 38 per cent. of the young men called for examination were found physically unfit, while 62 per cent. of those sent to camp were afflicted with minor disorders. It is the business of the school to make boys and girls physically fit as well as mentally. The child that buys knowledge at the price of its health pays more than the knowledge is worth. Of the millions enlisted in the United States for service in the world war four hundred thousand could not understand the language spoken by the officers in the training camps and had to be taught the English language.

The schools should teach everybody the language of the Republic and any one who does not in five years acquire a knowledge of the language ought to be put out. We don't want them here.

In speaking of the cost of the world war Dr. Brumbaugh said that nations are too extravagant, but now they should practice industry and frugality in order to pay the debt. Children should be taught in the schools to love their country enough to help redeem it. The way to change morals today is not by laws but by teaching economy, thoughtfulness and industry. Seventy-one per cent. of the criminals today are under voting age and should be in school. Children should be taught today that the wealth of this Republic is the character of its citizenry.

Following a session of music Dr. Charles Lose was introduced. Since he was here the last time Dr. Lose has lost the sight of both his eyes and had to be led to the rostrum, but he has lost none of the vigor that always characterized his talks. His subject on Monday was "Out Door Books for Teachers." Dr. Lose was always a great nature student and is the author of a number of books on life in the great open. To the teachers he said, when the school room walls seem to close in on you get out of doors or find a wide horizon some where through books on nature. As good, wholesome books he cited the writings of John Burroughs, Wake Robin, Gilbert White, Thoreau, Bradford Torry and Richard Jeffries. Outdoor books take us out of ourselves. In every real fisherman is something of the poet and the artist. It is not for the fish that he takes his trips to the mountain stream but because of what he learns from nature.

Dr. Lose stated that some years ago he looked forward to the time when he could devote all of his days to writing nature books of his out door experiences, but now that he has lost his sight he has great comfort in communing with himself and picturing in his mind the many happy trips he made to mountain and stream.

TUESDAY'S SESSIONS.

Tuesday morning's session of institute was opened with prayer by Rev. Reed O. Steely, of the Evangelical church, after which there was a brief period of singing. Dr. Brumbaugh then took the rostrum and talked on reading. To teach a child to read, he said, is the function of the public school. To teach him to continue to read is the function of the college. Reading ought to be one of the serious training habits of life, and it ought to be a crime for a child to be born into a bookless home. One should not think of spending a day without reading from some good book any more than one should think of going to breakfast without washing the face. Reading is thinking, but thinking in a special way. Teach the child to appreciate, to visualize, to understand what he reads.

The next speaker was Miss Margaret Maguire, principal of the McColl school, Philadelphia, who talked on "Ideals." The first question in the teaching profession is idealism in the mental makeup of the teacher, she said. The teacher who is in the profession merely for the money is in the wrong line of work. The child of today is a very interesting and complex problem. He is the direct product of the world as we have made it. Human nature does not change very much. In the old days the child never went home from school that mother wasn't there. He never went to evening parties simply because his parents wanted to go to their parties. The school is the sum total of the teacher and her ideals, and it is up to the teacher to teach the parents. We must take our eyes from the text book and lift them up. We must see the child in a world that is really living. The keynote of the school is character.

At the afternoon session Dr. Robert C. Shaw, deputy State Superintendent of Public Instruction, talked on "Our Public Schools." Among other things he said the greatest thing in the world is the human soul. The greatest work in the world is the help that touches upon the human soul. The public school system of America is not only a public school but the church and home as well.

Following Dr. Shaw announcement was made that Miss Jessie Scott Hines, of the Lock Haven Normal, booked as one of the instructors, was seriously ill, and her place would be filled by Levi Ulmer, also of the Normal, who was then introduced and gave a brief talk on nature study after which institute adjourned for the day.

WEDNESDAY SESSIONS.

Rev. Homer C. Knox led the devotional services at the opening of institute on Wednesday morning, and the first talk was by Dr. Brumbaugh on early Pennsylvania history. He told of the early settlers, who were German, Scotch, Scotch-Irish and Irish. They built churches and established schools, bringing higher culture into the new colony. Our ancestors gave us many gifts, but they paid the price, he said, and unless we teach children that they must pay the price in work and industry the future generations will suffer.

Following Dr. Brumbaugh, Miss Maguire talked on thinking and learning to think. She advocated knowing your subject and cut out your details. When teaching a subject be sure to find out what your children think about it.

The first portion of the afternoon session was devoted to demonstrations at the close of which institute was addressed by Miss Holmes, on the subject of Near East relief. Miss Maguire then concluded her talk on thinking and learning.

The speakers yesterday were Dr. Brumbaugh, C. Valentine Kirby, Miss Maguire and Jones E. Wagner, while one of the speakers at the closing session this morning will be Dr. W. Grant Chambers, of State College.

In addition to the main sessions of institute held in the court room sectional sessions were held in the grand jury room and out at the High school building, all of which were interesting and instructive.

Philipsburg Boys in Trouble for Breaking and Entering.

Weber Newman, Charles Stover and Isaac Custo, three Philipsburg boys ranging in age from eleven to fourteen years, were brought to the Centre county jail, last Friday morning, on the charge of breaking and entering. On Thursday night they were caught in the act of forcing an entrance into the Rowland theatre through the safety doors at the emergency exits. Three weeks previous the same three boys and Harry Prelin broke into the Myers pool room and took a dozen baseballs. Because of their youth they were then placed on probation on condition that they attend school regularly and refrain from their criminal tendencies. But owing to the fact that three of them were caught in another unlawful act in such a short time they were brought to Bellefonte and will have to answer for their acts in the juvenile court.

At a session of juvenile court on Tuesday Judge Keller paroled all the boys in the custody of their parents but admonished them that if they are again brought before him he will have to punish them in some way.

Splendid Fruit and Grain Display from Farm of L. F. White.

Last week the Bell Telephone company of Pennsylvania had a line of the various articles manufactured by the Titan Metal company on display in the big show windows of its business office in the Bush Arcade, and this week it has an exceptionally fine display of fruit and grain grown on the farm of L. F. White, who lives south of the Bellefonte aviation field, in Spring township. The display includes wheat, oats, corn and buckwheat; pumpkins, both cow and sweet; russet potatoes, fourteen different exhibits of apples, pears and quinces.

Of course for the exhibit Mr. White naturally selected a good average of fruit, but it must be admitted that he has some very fine apples on display, and all of them are of the best kind that can be grown in this climate. In his orchards he expects to have between two and three hundred bushels of hand-picked fruit, and all of them have been sold in advance with the exception of three varieties.

Five More Illegal Deer Hunters Arrested Last Week.

With the arrest last week of five more men who have been killing deer illegally in the mountains of Centre county game protectors Thomas G. Mosier, of Bellefonte, and Miles Reeder, of the Union-Snyder counties district, believe they have pretty well broken up the organized gangs which have been killing deer whole-sale in the Seven mountains during the summer.

The latest arrests included Clifford Wilson, of Millheim; Porter G. Snyder, of DuBois; Gomer Stitt, of Williamsport; Ed Horner, of Lemont, and Rush Dipprey, of State College. All the above paid $100 fine and costs, with the exception of Wilson, who did not have the money and was sent to the Centre county jail for 118 days.

All told the wardens have captured nineteen illegal hunters and have collected $1,800 in fines not counting the costs, which run from fifteen to twenty dollars a man. Naturally the game wardens have had some peculiar experiences. In one instance they trailed the hunter right to his own home and feeling convinced that he had some of the venison in the house the warden secured a search warrant and visited the home. On entering the kitchen he saw "the wife of the man hurriedly put a roasting pan into the oven of the stove. On presenting his search warrant she became quite indignant over the proposition to search her home but the warden persisted, and the first place he looked was in the roasting pan where he found a big, juicy roast of venison. It is needless to say the meat was confiscated.

All the killing of deer, however, was not done merely for a mess of venison, as the wardens claim they have evidence to show that some of it was made into sausage, some into bologna and some of it was marketed as veal. While the wardens know the names of some of the purchasers no action will be taken against them as the meat was purchased in good faith as veal and with no knowledge that it was venison.

While it has been impossible to get a line on the number of deer that have been killed in the Seven mountains during the summer, it is estimated that from forty to fifty fell prey to the poachers, and the number might even be greater. Last Saturday morning two dead deer were brought into Bellefonte and turned over to the Bellefonte hospital. One of the animals was killed by a dog over back of Boalsburg, the dog being shot by Ed Isenberg. The other deer was shot by a farmer up near Pennsylvania Furnace while in the act of destroying his crops. According to the law the farmer was within his rights in shooting the deer and no action will be taken against him.

Small Game Hunting Season Will Open Next Monday.

If the number of hunting licenses issued by county treasurer J. O. Heverly can be taken as a criterion of the army of hunters who will hie to the woods early next Monday morning, the opening of the small game hunting season, there will be more hunters than there is game. Up to Monday afternoon of this week just 3636 licenses had been issued and the number will probably reach four thousand before the end of the week.

Just how plentiful game is in Centre county will not be definitely known until after the hunters make a try for it. Of course there are lots of rabbits, but squirrel are growing scarcer every year and pheasants have not been very plentiful for two years, although some hunters who have been out in the woods on scouting expeditions report more of them this year than last. Whether they will be able to find them next week when they go out with a gun remains to be seen.

The Hon. John T. McCormick, of State College, was in town last Thursday and, my, but he was mad. Ordinarily Mr. McCormick is a very placid gentleman and to see him in a mood that fairly shouted his desire to shoot to kill somewhat startled us. You see, the trouble was this: Some years ago he set out a lot of promising young apple trees on that ancestral farm of his up in Ferguson township and they grew well. The neighbors, the cattle, the borers and the rabbits left them alone until Mr. McCormick felt sure that he was to have a fine young orchard. Then came the deer, the last thing any farmer of ten years ago ever figured would become an orchard pest in Centre county. The bucks have found out that the McCormick trees are just the best ever for rubbing their horns on and they have so much of the bark rubbed off them and they're going to die and that's what riled Mr. McCormick. It is not often that he doesn't know what to do about a thing, but in this one he was stumped and was hunting a game warden who would either go up and guard his orchard or give him permission to dehorn the bucks by shooting them first.
