WEAVER.—The quiet of our little community was disturbed on Monday morning, about eight o'clock, when the death angel entered the home of our friend and neighbor and took with it the spirit of the head of the home, George J. Weaver. Mr. Weaver had been in ill health for some time past but was feeling so much better that when, on Sunday morning, the word went about that he was again confined to his bed there was some thing of alarm. But when death came it was a profound shock, as his family and friends were hopeful of his recovery. After intense suffering for a long time he is now at rest where there is no longer any pain and sorrow. His wife, who before her marriage to Mr. Weaver was Miss Kate Stover, survives with one sister, Mrs. C. C. Bell, of Huntingdon, and two brothers, C. A. Weaver, of Bethlehem, and T. C. Weaver, of this place. The funeral was held Thursday at 10 a. m., in charge of his pastor, the Rev. G. A. Fred Griesing, of the Reformed church, of which he was a faithful member. ### A NEW COMET HEADING THIS WAY.

Comets, according to Dr. Andrew Crommelin, of Greenwich Observatory, are not and never will be dangerous to the earth.

Dr. Crommelin, one of the world's leading experts on comets, has recently been taking photographs of the Pons-Winnecke comet, which is now approaching the earth at the rate of a million miles a day.

On June 27 this comet will be nearest to us, namely, three and a half million miles away. "There was much excitement in 1921," said Dr. Crommelin, "when Pons-Winnecke was twelve million miles away, and people thought that it might burn us if it came too near. But there is no fire in a comet. The tail is a mere bunch of vapors, which are so thin that you can even see stars through them. Twice in modern times we have gone through the tail of a comet, the last occasion being in 1910, when we went through the tail of Halley's comet."

Even if the head of a comet struck the earth, Dr. Crommelin thinks, there would be no serious consequences. The head of a comet is a dense swarm of meteoric masses, and some of the bigger meteors might cause a few casualties. But that is all, and that is likely to occur only once in millions of years.
