BELLEFONTE HIGH SCHOOL

ANNUAL COMMENCEMENT. Exercises which Featured the Week's Activities.

The forty-fourth annual commencement of the Bellefonte High school, with its accompanying exercises, began last Friday evening, with the alumni dance, which was held in the new pavilion at Hecla park. Bot-torf's orchestra, of State College, furnished the music.

There was an unusually large attendance because the dance was made more or less a public affair and not confined exclusively to the alumni, and their guests of honor, the graduating class. It proved a delightful function. ·

BACCALAUREATE SUNDAY. On Sunday evening, June 5th, the graduating class, numbering about sixty, accompanied by two members of the Board of Education and the High school faculty, marched to the Presbyterian church, where the baccalaureate sermon was preached by the Rev. Homer C. Knox, of the Methodist church, the other ministers taking part in the service. The music for this occasion was furnished by a choir of grade school children from both buildings, under the direction of Alberta M. Krader, music supervisor of the public schools. Rev. Knox took his text from Micah 6 and 8, "What doth the Lord require of Thee." I, A world we must master. II, A world me must serve. It was a masterful sermon, just such an one as was splendidly suited to the service, which was very impressive throughout. The singing of the grade children seemed to so inspire the immense congregation that three grand old hymns used were sung by it with a spirit seldom heard in any of our

THE ATLANTIC OCEAN. A new long-distance flying record of 3,780 miles was established in the trans-Atlantic flight of Clarence D. Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine, in the Columbia monoplane. The two men hopped off at Roosevelt field, N. Y., at 6.05 Saturday morning and landing at Eisleben, Germany, at midnight, Sunday night. They were bound for Berlin, but were forced down because they ran out of gas. Securing a supply of gas they again took to the air at 4.30 Monday morning but became lost in the clouds and rain and again were forced down on account of motor trouble, landing in a swamp at Klinge, 110 miles southwest of Berlin. One of the propellers was broken in the landing.

The former record of 3,610 miles, established by Captain Charles A. Lindbergh on his New York to Paris flight, was shattered by the Bellanca monoplane Columbia shortly after it had passed Boulogue Sur Mer on the northwestern coast of France. The new record was established when the plane made its forced landing at Eisleben, about 110 miles southwest of Berlin. The Columbia in its trans-Atlantic flight also came near approaching the world's record for sustained flight recently established by the same plane with Chamberlin and Bert Acosta when the pair flew over Long Island for more than 51 hours. The present endurance record was 42 hours. The daring voyage of the Columbia marked the third time the Atlantic has been spanned in nonstop flights by heavier than air machines. Alcock and Brown, Englishmen, flying from New Foundland to Ireland in 1919, were the original trans-oceanic airplane trail blazers. Lindbergh's great Chamberlin used about nine and one-half gallons of his 451 gallons of gasoline an hour, said Giuseppe M. Bellanca, designer of the plane. This consumption would permit 48 hours of flying, or fuel for a flight some distance beyond Berlin.

Chamberlin and Levine travelled slower than Captain Lindbergh but their flight was 180 miles longer than that of the trans-Atlantic trail blazer, The Columbia team was behind the schedule set by Captain Lindbergh throughout the voyage.

The Columbia following a more southerly course than that of Lindbergh's Spirit of St. Louis, covered the 1,900 miles water jump from New Foundland in just 21 hours, three hours and 45 minutes more than that required by Lindbergh. After flying unsighted through Saturday night the Columbia was seen by the Cunard liner Mauretania 360 miles off the Scilly Islands at 11.30 a. m. on Sunady. From then on steady reports of her flight into Europe toward the Berlin goal were received. The two men took turns at guiding the ship and were not overly fatigued when they landed in Germany. -For Saturday only. Bridge F. W. West Co. 33-1t
