Bellefonte, Pa., July 1, 1927.

NEWS ABOUT TOWN AND COUNTY.

-August 27th has been set as the date for the reunion and picnic at Scotia.

--Petitions for the various candidates for Judge in Centre county are now being circulated for signers.

-During the first five months of this year twelve residents of Centre county were prosecuted for violations of the dog law.

-Hundreds of school teachers passed through Bellefonte on Sunday enroute to State Colege for the annual summer session.

-One hundred and five tickets Saturday night, for the one day excursion to Atlantic City.

-The latest entrant into the political arena in Centre county is D. Wagner Geiss, of Bellefonte, as a canticket.

-----There are now 8252 teachers enrolled in the various extension teacher training courses offered by The Pennsylvania State College. Five years ago there were less than half that number.

-Marriage licenses granted at Hagerstown, Md., on Monday, included thøse to John F. Boal and Florence Houser, both of Bellefonte; Henry Coble, Mt. Royal, and Ida J. Walker, Beech Creek.

-The bass fishing season opened this morning but as this species of fish is not very plentiful in Centre county the legal season for catching them has not caused much of a stir among fishermen hereabouts.

-The sheet asphalt road between Bellefonte and Pleasant Gap that was laid only a few years ago, is disintegrating so fast that last Friday preparations were begun to chip it with limestone with the hope of prolonging its life a few years.

-The radio broadcasting station of the Pennsylvania State College will continue with programs during the summer months. Its new wave length is 299.8 meters. Students of the institute of music education will provide entertainment at least once a week.

The tri-county council American Legion Auxiliary, which includes Centre, Clinton and Lycoming counties, will hold a basket picnic at Hecla park on Thursday, July 28th. All Legion and Auxiliary members are invited to attend and take their friends.

burg, on Tuesday of last week, on the application of the Pennsylvania Railroad company to abandon that portion of the Lewisburg and Tyrone railroad from Stover to Fairbrook, a distance of approximately fourteen miles. Protests were presented at the hearing from residents of Warriorsmark valley and Ferguson township, in the western end of Centre county, who are solely dependent on the road for all their freight shipments, both out-going and incoming.

The railroad company, however, contends that the average daily were sold at the Bellefonte depot, on freight shipments between Stover and Fairbrook, the terminus of the line, is only two carloads, and on that the company is losing money. The protestants, however, claim that it is illogical to abandon a portion of the didate for recorder on the Democratic line and that the revenue from the paying section (that portion of the road from Tyrone to Stover) is sufficient to make a small profit on the whole road. The question, however, is now before the Public Service Commission and upon its decision rests the fate of the road.

The Lewisburg and Tyrone railroad was built through to Pennsylvania Furnace almost forty years ago. In fact it was in August, 1879, when it was opened for traffic. At that time Pennsylvania Furnace was in full operation. Several years later the late Andrew Carnegie took over the operation of the furnace and also secured the rights to the iron ore at Scotia. The road was then extended Tow Hill, which had also been leased by the Carnegie interests. With the building of the Bellefonte furnace in the latter eighties the Buffalo Run railroad was built through to State College and a branch line ex-
