Junior Colleges in Many Cities.

Going to college in the public school system is becoming possible in many cities by the rapid growth of the Junior college movement, which is found to have doubled in the last five years. Dr. L. V. Koos reported to the Institute for Administrative Officers of Institutions of Higher Education.

Dr. Koos, professor of secondary education at the University of Minnesota, recently made a study of the growth of this young movement which extends public schools education by offering two years of accredited college work in the city system. There are now about 100 public junior colleges, he found, more than twice the number reported in 1922. Moreover, enrollments in these colleges have increased about 200 per cent.

Private junior colleges and those on State foundations swell the number in the United States to well over 300, above 100 more than were in existence five years ago.

The object of the junior college in the public school is something much deeper than that of merely enabling students to continue their education while living at home, the investigator made clear. He declared the junior college has a "democratizing function." He defined this as "the function of adapting the work on this level to the wider range of ability represented among those now knocking for entrance."

Nothing the college or high school does can stem the tide of these young people who want more education, he said, adding:

"It is heaped up by forces too profound for schools to attempt to control. To be sure, the individual college or secondary school may decide to exclude students in this or that portion of the distribution of ability in schools lower down, but it is thereby merely shifting the burden to other institutions and is in effect announcing that it is not concerned with the great problem of American education, the problem of an adequately popularized education."

General education rather than specialized training for a profession is seen by this educator to be the chief function of the junior college for the first two years of college work. The two years of the junior college, Dr. Koos maintained will call for radical modifications of the curriculum so that studies are not chosen for their value in sifting good students from poor ones, but for their genuine educational worth to all.

"Discharging this obligation of devoting its work to the ability of the student is in no sense a relinquishment of standards," Dr. Koos insisted. "Standards should be properly defined by insisting that the student work up to the extent of his ability."

Drawing for Place on Ballot.

The County Commissioners will conduct a drawing period for candidates to be placed in the proper order on the primary ballot, at the Court House on Friday, August 19th. This drawing is made legal by the election laws of the State.

Under the law, all candidates for office, from the highest in the gift of the people to the lowest, must file a petition with the Commissioners, setting forth the office for which they are a candidate, the party, etc.

This petition must be filed on or before August 16th, that being the last date to have the name printed on the official primary ballot. The order of the names for the various offices on the official ballot is determined, according to law, by lot.

The time for casting lots is fixed by the Commissioners, and the date selected for this important duty is August 19th. Immediately after the time expires for filing petitions, all candidates will be notified by postal card from the Commissioners' office of the time for appearing for the drawing of names.

This is considered important by candidates, who may appear in person or by agent, duly authorized by letter of attorney, signed and acknowledged by an officer empowered to take acknowledgements.

In case where a candidate does not appear for the drawing or is not represented by a duly authorized agent, the County Commissioners will appoint some person to represent such absentee.

First place on the ballot is a coveted honor. By politicians, it is usually considered worth a considerable number of votes, since it is figured that many voters, not being familiar with the candidates, mark the first name on the ballot and let it go at that.

Since every borough and township in the county is electing local officials this year, there will be a lot of drawing for places.

New Detour Sign Will Aid Motorists.

A new system of markers to guide travelers over detours and temporary routes during the construction season have been provided by the State Department of Highways, James Lyall Stuart, secretary of highways, announced recently.

"Detour," in large black letters appearing over the standard keystone will mean that the tourist is passing over a county, township or borough road rather than State highway. "Temporary" will mean that traffic is being diverted from the established route on another State highway.

The special markers will generally appear on sign posts so that they may not be confused with the permanent route markers.
