Are We Getting Soft?

Berkley, California Sept. 19, 1927.

My dear George: I have fallen into arrears so I am enclosing a check which will improve the appearance of the label on my paper.

I still am of the opinion that the Watchman is the best weekly published in the United States, but it appears to me that you are weakening in your stalwart Democracy. "Ink Slings" was devoted to diatribes against the Republicans or exaltation of deserving Democrats. Now, however, I detect a sort of mellow philosophy permeating the column which, while pleasant reading, is not making votes for your party.

By the way, since you are now going into literature, can you give me your opinion, publicly, of the relative merits of the schools of thought represented by the Saturday Evening Post and the American Mercury.

My family is well, My father celebrated his eightieth birthday last August and went to show in Oakland in the evening. He is still interested in politics and plays farwent but unshod bridge whenever he gets a chance.

With best wishes, I am Sincerely C. P. M.

P. S. Now that you have finished with Dr. Colfelt why not have the unexpurgated memoirs of the Editor. It should make good copy.

Such a graceful letter as C. P. M. has written deserves more of consideration than we have time to give it now, but we intend answering the questions and complying with the suggestions he has made at the earliest date convenient.
