

BOALSBURG.

A little daughter arrived at the Nevel home last week.

Mrs. Anne Patterson had her residence wired for electricity last week.

Cyrus Wagner, of Altoona, spent Sunday with his father, S. J. Wagner.

Misses Ida and Mary Segner went to Philadelphia, Wednesday, for a visit with friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Weber, Edward and Miss Alice Weber, were visitors in town on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Meyer entertained Mr. and Mrs. John Kimport, at dinner, on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Tannis, of Scalp Level, enjoyed a week-end visit with their son William and wife.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Goheen and Mrs. E. R. Tussey spent Friday at the John B. Goheen home, at Rock Spring.

Mr. and Mrs. Barner, of Maine, arrived in town, Thursday, for an indefinite visit with their daughter, Mrs. O. F. Smith and family.

The annual Hess-Thomas-Everhart birthday anniversary was celebrated at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Hess, on Saturday evening.

The women's class of the Reformed Sunday school will hold their annual bazaar and chicken supper on Saturday afternoon and evening, Nov. 19.

Union Thanksgiving services will be held in the Lutheran church Wednesday evening, Nov. 23, at 7:30. Rev. Moyer will preach the sermon and a union choir will lead the singing.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Zion Lutheran church, Boalsburg, will hold their annual thank offering service on Sunday morning, Nov. 20th, at 10:30. The Light Brigade, a missionary organization of the children, will have part in the service. Rev. John H. Wagner, of Brooklyn, N. Y., will bring a home mission message. At this service the thank offering gifts will be received. We cordially invite all to the service.

Odd Contradictions in

Famous German Writer

Made miserable by fundamental contradictions in character, Heinrich Heine, a genius best remembered for his poems, cried: "I am tragedy—I am comedy." Though he was probably the greatest German poet of his century, the author of "The Lorelei" was constantly appalled by the vastness of his vision and sought a firmer footing on other paths of expression. When he could curb his poetry he was a splendid journalist.

While he hated despotism he was an ardent admirer of Napoleon. As a cynic his laughter still is remembered for its hilarity at sentiment, yet he was such a sentimentalist that his spurned love for his cousin gave exquisite wings to many a poem. He wrote history without method and philosophy with no crystallized philosophy of his own. The capricious quality that pervades all his writings lurks in even his tenderest poems. He shifts from intense passion to careless mockery.

His life, until his invalidism, was one agony of being jerked from poetry to materialism and back again. Yet when he was made helpless by paralysis this strange man of contradictions, who had been impatient and irritable in health, showed an extraordinary endurance and cheerfulness in the long years he spent on what he termed his "mattress grave." He died in 1856 and lies buried in Paris.—Kansas City Star.

Odd Form of "Prayer"

Brought Needed Rain

Desperate after a month of drought in what was supposed to be the rainy season, the peasants in Chungshintien recently dressed up two men like fish and marched them down the street, pouring water on them all the way. This is a new method of praying for rain.

It worked, too! For that night Peking and neighboring towns were drenched in a frightful storm. Nothing like it is ever seen in New York. A peculiar sort of lightning, flashing continuously here and there and everywhere, and thunder keeping up a constant "put-putting" sound feature the storm. Lakes come into existence everywhere. The storm seems somehow symbolic of the approach of threatening nationalist troops.

Strangely, the Pekingese prayed for rain in earnest, too. In White Cloud temple, outside Hsiapienmen temple, and at Hsizu Pailou, coolies, old men and priests burned beads and bowed incessantly. They followed the ancient rain-praying rites.

But the inhabitants of Chungshintien are believed to have found a new method of rain praying in the fish parade. People in Peking had not heard of it before.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Animals' Color Sense

The colorful world of green grass and trees, red meat, brownish-gray mice and yellow dogs is all just gray to cats, according to Prof. F. M. Gregg of Nebraska Wesleyan university, who experimented with the color scheme of night-prowling animals. Dogs and raccoons also lack color perception he finds. In his experiments the animals were taught to recognize various color combinations. They learned that when certain colors were shown they could come up and expect to be fed. When shades of gray corresponding in brightness to the different colors were substituted for the brilliant rainbow hues, the animals apparently noted no change in the dinner signals. The dog, a fox terrier, was quickest to learn, the cat next, and the raccoon the slowest of all.

Vital Part of Tree

The stem of a tree, also called trunk and bole, is the main axis extending from the roots to the crown, or to the tip in case of an unbranched stem. Tree stems range from long to short, straight to crooked, and from erect to prostrate. An examination of a cross-section of a stem will show bark, wood, and pith, says the American Tree association. In the central part of the stem is the pith. About it is the wood, which in many trees can be divided into the darker heartwood and the lighter sapwood. Between the wood and the bark is a thin layer known as the cambium. This is the most vital part of a tree, for it is here that all new wood and bark are made up.

Death to Mosquitoes

Efforts to find a poison that will kill the mosquito larvae and not harm fish have been successful in France. Here, therefore all poison designed to spread over breeding places of mosquitoes has been harmful to other life, but the new compound will not only spare the fish, but will be harmless to aquatic plants or warm-blooded animals, it is claimed. It is a formaldehyde compound that can be applied with sand.

Dark Rubber Lasting

For rubber articles that are likely to be exposed to sunlight, rubber of the darkest color will stay "alive" the longest. Recent experiments in the rubber laboratory of the United States bureau of standards, reported by Popular Science Monthly, have demonstrated that the shade of rubber goods has much to do with their durability.

Not a Chance

No man under thirty is a match in intelligence for a woman of twenty.—American Magazine.

Keeps Car on Rails

Many people think that a train is kept on the rails by the flange or rim that is on the inside edge of the wheel. This flange steers the car, but does not keep it on the rails. The rail is slightly rounded on top, as is the rim of the car wheel, so that the wheel does not rest squarely on the rail. The outer circumference of the wheel is smaller than the inner and the wheel rests on the inner slope of the rounded rail. In running the wheels press outward because it is easier for them to run along the smallest edge and on top of the rail. By pushing outward and exerting the same force in opposite directions the wheels keep each other balanced and on the rails.

Germ-Proof Upholstery

Odors of such common plants as cloves, thyme, wild verbena, geranium and cinnamon will protect automobile upholstery against germs, an English expert has discovered. Upholstery in which quantities of the plants have been mixed remains germ-proof for eighteen months to two years.

He found that the odor of cloves would kill microbes in thirty-five minutes, while cinnamon killed some species in twelve minutes. The essence of cinnamon was fatal, he claims, to typhoid-fever bacteria after twelve minutes.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.
