Planned City of Refuge

In 1824 an idea occurred to the late Maj. Mordecai M. Noah, a distinguished Israelite of the city of New York, then editor of a prominent political journal called the National Advocate, that Grand Island, in the Niagara river, would make a suitable asylum for the Jews of all nations, whereon they could establish a great city and become emancipated from the oppression bearing so heavily upon them in foreign countries. The city of Ararah, which he contemplated founding for this purpose, never developed after a series of failures and disappointments on his part.

Can You Beat It?

One of our friends dropped in the other morning.

"I'm going to tell you," he said, "about the meanest man you ever heard of."

"Some stunt," said we.

"Listen," said he. "I was driving over town in Wednesday's rain and saw a good-looking man plodding along sans umbrella. I held up and asked him to ride. He accepted. On Congress street he said, 'I'll get out here.' I let him out. A little later I looked back in the tonneau for the umbrella I had there. That had gone too."—Portland Evening Express.

EDISON'S NEW INVENTION FIRST IN SCHOOL'S UNIQUE MUSIC TEST

Tona! Beauty Wins in Curtain Competition at Mill Valley Before Mt. Tamalpais School Authorities.

The purchase of several music reproducing instruments recently came up for consideration at the Mt. Tamalpais high school, in Mill Valley, California.

The authorities fully realized the importance of their decision on the school's work in musical instruction, for the excellence of which Mt. Tamalpais enjoys a widespread reputation.

The board determined that neither personal preference nor hearsay evidence should influence their choice. Recognizing the power of well-known names frequently to color an individual's judgment, they resolved to make a test of instruments which should be nameless to the hearers!

Accordingly, makers of the foremost music-reproducing instruments were invited to send samples of their products to the school for a comparative test. The various instruments were assembled, concealed completely behind curtains, and identified to the hearers only by number.

This arrangement guaranteed a choice which was entirely impartial, the decision being made solely on the evidence which reached the hearers' ears.

The decision was not based on one comparison, but seven! After seven complete comparisons of the entire group, the unanimous opinion was in favor of Instrument Number Five, as giving the most perfect tonal reproduction, while second choice favored Instrument Number Two. The results are of interest to every music lover.

Instrument Number Five proved to be the new Edison playing Edison Records, while Instrument Number Two revealed itself as the new Edison equipped with an attachment, playing needle-type records.

As the local Edison dealer, Mr. Harter, Harter's Music Store, remarked, when told of this test: "A sweeping victory, and no wonder! The interest already displayed in the new Edison in this vicinity convinces us that Mr. Edison has achieved the ultimate in music-reproducing instruments. Every day, more people are asking to hear 'close-up' music!"
