Five minutes later he was pronounced dead by Dr. C. J. Newcombe.

He was a veteran of the World war, an artist and musician and for several years had worked as a street car conductor in Pittsburgh. Five respites had been granted Winter during the efforts of his family and attorneys to save him from the death chair.

Slook, in Philadelphia, on the morning of January 13th, 1927, when the policeman attempted to arrest him for driving without lights on his car.
