Policemen of New York to be Taught Rules of Courtesy.

In Gotham heretofore the big burly, busy New York policemen have been taught to shoot straight and to swing a mean night stick, to the general neglect of Chesterfieldian manners. But that is all past now. Police Commissioner Warren has determined that the "boys" in blue must be perfect gentlemen of the old school as well as efficient enforcers of the law. In the future they must not get unnecessarily rough, and they must not use unseemly language—which which may be hard on some members of the force.

It all started recently when Commissioner Warren, unobserved by the traffic policeman, heard the custodian of traffic hand out a summons to an automobile driver who had "taken a chance" on passing a traffic light. The language the traffic officer used, Commissioner Warren thought, was much too vigorous and blunt to be considered representative of his department.

Therefore an official polishing process has begun in New York's police department. Every traffic policeman in the city is to be taught courtesy—a sort of finishing school course guaranteed to pound into the dumbest flat-foot in "Hell's Kitchen" district an "old family" cordiality and a chew-with-your-mouth-closed refinement. When the instructors finish with the traffic squad it is expected that they will serve tickets on motorists who have violated traffic regulations with a "Please accept this ticket, kind sir," apology. The "finishing classes," are being held in the rooms of the Police Academy and the men must attend the lectures during their time off duty.

Million Persons in India Are Suffering From Leprosy.

In Calcutta an optimistic outlook for the treatment of leprosy in the future is contained in the annual report of the Mission to Lepers, which has recently been issued. The report covers the work accomplished in the last year in ministering to the 1,000,000 persons in India who are suffering from the disease.

"After a decade of experiment and experience of recent discoveries and improved treatment methods," the report states, "the day of hope for the leper has dawned."

Nearly ten years have passed since the introduction of the chaulmoogra oil treatment for leprosy, and Dr. R. C. Cochran, medical adviser to the mission, considers the time opportune for an examination of the present situation.

"It is no exaggeration to say," Dr. Cochran declared, "that every case of early leprosy, if treated properly, that is, with due attention being given to exercise, good food and all the other adjuncts to the chaulmoogra treatment should recover completely from the disease."

"While saying this we have to recognize that the present day treatment of leprosy is by no means perfect, and that in spite of many en-encouraging results, failures are often reported.

"But in spite of pessimistic reports that have been issued from time to time, there has been no other decade in the whole history of leprosy when hope has run so high and when the massed results all over the world have justified such optimism. It seems that the rays of the dawn of a new era have at last appeared to dispel the darkness of the leper's night."
