The representatives of the Philadelphia machine seem to have imagined that the sub-committee would count the votes just as the Philadelphia election boards count and when they found a keen-minded and courageous citizen of Philadelphia who knew their tricks on duty as watcher they became panic stricken. As a matter of fact they do not want a recount of the votes at all and hoped that the action they adopted would result in an abandonment of the purpose for which the sub-committee was appointed. It was as foolish an expedient as it was futile, for the majority of the Senators have clearly shown that they intend to get the facts and expose the fraud.

VICTIM OF AUTO ACCIDENT.

juries Received Friday Night. The State College community was shocked by the death of a Penn State Junior agricultural student, Alex R. Phillips, of Montclair, N. J., which occurred early Saturday morning following an automobile accident near Tyrone Friday night. Young Phillips had accompanied a fellow student, James K. Strunk, a Senior, from Bangor, in a car borrowed from a State College merchant, to Tyrone to meet a girl friend of Strunk's arriving on the 9:25 train. Strunk, who was driving, was not very familiar with the road. After passing a large stone quarry not far from hundred feet further a sharp left hand turn. Strunk was not expecting this turn and the closed car left the tle difficulty in getting out and all thought they had escaped serious injury. A passing motorist gave the jury. A passing motorist gave the trio a lift, and when they reached Pine the Mrs. W. K. Corl home. Grove Mills, Phillips complained of severe pains in his head. Arriving in State College Strunk accompanied Phillips to his room in Watt's hall and he laid down on his bed, saying that after he rested a little he intended dressing to go to a dance. He still complained of pains in his head and when Dr. J. P. Ritenour was called in at 3:15 a. m. the student was dead. He found severe head injuries and that night, upon advice of college officials and the boy's friends, three State College physicians conducted an autopsy and found the left side of the skull to be fracturned and the right side severely contused. Beneath the contusion they found a blood clot of a size sufficient to make death inevitable. They were of the opinion that even a skilled surgeon operating soon after the accident probably could not have saved on reviewed the case on Sunday and gave a verdict of accidental death.

The parents of young Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Phillips, a brother, two sisters and an uncle arrived in State College Sunday morning and arranged to ship the body to Dallas, Tex., their former home, where burial was made Wednesday from the Westminster Presbyterian church. The parents are said to have absolved Strunk from responsibility, and they congratulated and thanked college officials for their thorough investigascratches and bruises. Young Phil-
