Penn State Students Fit and Show Stock.

Penn State students in animal husbandry staged their twelfth annual Little International Livestock Exposition, Saturday, April 21. The event was under the direction of the Block and Bridle club, campus organization of livestock enthusiasts.

The men's glee club of the Pennsylvania State College is to enjoy a seven weeks' trip to Europe this summer, according to announcement by Professor R. W. Grant, director of the club and head of the music department of the college.

It will be the longest trip ever taken by a Penn State glee club. The club of 1913 journeyed to California on a concert tour, via the Panama Canal, and a quartet later went on a similar journey.

PINE MOUNTAIN LOSES FRIEND.

Friends all over America and in England are learning with sorrow of the death, on March 18, of Mrs. Ethel Beason, Zande, founder, principal and friend of the Pine Mountain Settlement School in Kentucky.

Where, fifteen years ago, a lonely cabin stood on the far side of Pine Mountain in a remote corner of Harlan county, Kentucky, and where a host of children, living at the heads of hollows and along wild creeks, had no opportunity, there now stands, largely through the efforts of Mrs. Zande, one of the finest settlement schools in the Appalachians, a school that shelters over a hundred children, and whose influence, medical, educational and religious, extends far into the wilderness.

It is given to few to accomplish as much in fifteen years as she did. When, in 1911, Mr. William Creech, a mountaineer, offered all the land he possessed, 136 acres, "to be used for school purposes as long as the Constitution of the United States shall stand," Mrs. Zande and Miss Katherine Pettit came at his invitation from the Hindman school in Knott county, Ky., and started the Pine Mountain Settlement School. Mrs. Zande became its principal and director.

From the beginning Pine Mountain was a place beloved by children. Money had to be raised and Mrs. Zande made flying trips out into the world, winning by her talks an increasing number of friends for her work. When she could not leave she wrote for funds, frequently receiving with the money thanks for the refreshment of her letter.

Today a child arriving at the Pine Mountain school receives expert medical attention then places at a fire-side more beautifully homelike than institutional. Certain hours of the day he works to help earn his way and keep the school family going, and while he works is shown that the business of living is an art.

Because of her delight in the folk songs and dances brought in by the children, the school is noted as a centre for the collecting of Appalachian folklore, and has offered riches to the late Cecil Sharp of England, Percy Mackaye, William Aspinwall Bradley, Miss Lorraine Wyman, Howard Brockway and others.

On the day of Mrs. Zande's funeral daffodils she had planted were in bloom in the Pine Mountain valley, but snow on the heights did not keep her friends, old and young, some with babies in arms, from crossing steep trails to honor her. Former students of hers now in college came with Dr. Zeigler and Dean Baird of Berea. The chapel was thronged with those who loved her, and even in her passing she gave them of her strength, and there was not the usual "give way" of a mountain funeral, but consciousness of her spiritual presence and hope that her work will live on. She was laid to rest on a little rise of ground where the view encompasses the valley she loved.

In this day, when so many of those who have had large opportunities are increasingly crowding in to the great urban centres to use their gifts, it is well that we pause and pay tribute to this woman of rare talents, who rejoiced in devoting them to an underprivileged people in a remote mountain section.

Trees Along Our Highways.

An effort in several States is being made to launch a program of roadside tree planting, which will no doubt meet with the approval of motorists, especially ten or fifteen years from now when the trees begin to provide foliage along the highways.

Those in charge of the work of planting trees have several problems which must be overcome, before general tree planting can go into effect, chief among these problems being to obtain right-of-way along narrow roads and in making arrangements whereby the trees when they grow into large ones, will not be in the way of overhead wires of telephone and electric companies.

In some instances the routes would have to be widened. The trees cannot be planted along the shoulder or slope of a road, nor in the side ditches where they would interfere with the drainage. They should be planted only on the outside of curves and in burrow pits or otherwise waste corners along the highways where they will not be disturbed.

In order to place the tree planting plan into effect in general usage, State or national legislation should be obtained so that the program could be placed on some definite plan.

The planting of trees along our highways would not only be ornamental, but would be step forward in the part of the nationwide program to reforest the country.

Poultry Shipping Rules Effective on January 1, 1929.

Revision of express regulations relative to shipping coops for poultry will be made effective on January 1, 1929. These new regulations provide that shipping coops must be large enough to prevent overcrowding and the top of each coop must be covered by slats not more than one inch apart, or by wire screen containing meshes not to exceed one inch in size. The charges will be based upon the gross weight of coop and contents at the time of shipment.

It was proposed that these regulations would be made effective at once, but through the efforts of Harrison F. Jones, secretary, National Poultry, Butter and Egg association, the express company was urged to withhold the new classification in order that shippers might have time to become conversant with the rules before they were made effective.

Considerable loss has been experienced in the past through the crushing of heads of birds. This will be prevented in the new coops with the slats of the tops closer together.

Plum Crop Damaged.

Fruit growers of the county after surveying their orchards, following the severe freeze of Saturday night and Sunday expressed the belief that the plum crop was the only one that had been seriously harmed. It is believed to have been ruined, as the trees were in full bloom. Peaches and apples were not so far advanced and probably escaped being blinded.

80,000 Rabbits Are Released in State.

The Pennsylvania State Game Commission has announced the release of the largest number of cottontail rabbits ever purchased and released for stocking purposes in any one year in this Commonwealth. A total of 80,564 rabbits were distributed.

All of these animals were procured from dealers in Missouri and Kansas. These dealers guarantee that no stock handled by them is affected by the dreaded and mysterious Tularemia or Rabbit Fever. All animals are in perfect condition when leaving the dealers' hands. Upon their arrival at the various points in Pennsylvania where they are to be released they are promptly cared for by the game protectors and any sick or imperfect animals are weeded out. They are shipped in new, clean crates and are given the best of attention on their journey.

The game protector often finds it advisable to keep the crated animals for a time until weather conditions are propitious. Sometimes it is necessary to take the animals for some distance. If they are released in winter the game protector considers it part of his duty to see that food is placed in accessible situations for the animals.
