Hospital Restores Mental Patients to Places in Society.

Twenty-four patients returned to their families, restored in mental health, following treatment at the Danville State Hospital for Mental Diseases, according to the report to the Board of Trustees at its monthly meeting here.

Fifteen were discharged as sufficiently improved to return to their families, 3 were transferred to other institutions and 200 are on furloughs. The figures bear out the part played by the mental hospital as an institution for care and cure, rather than solely for custody and confinement.

Patients admitted to the Danville Hospital for mental diseases undergo treatment similar in method and purpose to that meted out to patients in the medical hospitals. The object of the hospital staff and officials is to cure those who are amenable to cure and restore them to their families, and do render the best care and treatment to patients whose condition is beyond cure.

Patients upon their admission undergo clinical diagnosis and receive constant medical, surgical and mental treatment from the members of the competent staff in charge of the hospital throughout their stay in the institution.

The 200 patients released on furlough continue to receive supervision through the nine mental health clinics established by the hospital throughout its district of 22 counties. There are 1716 patients in the hospital, 864 men and 852 women, according to the census report for the quarter submitted to the trustees by Dr. J. Allen Jackson, superintendent.

See Russia Supplying Oil to United States.

Moscow—Soviet Russia will be supplying oil to the United States in five years and virtually force America to help in the reconstruction of Russia in order to keep a favorable balance of trade, said Professor Striejev, noted Soviet geologist.

At the present rate of wasteful exploitation of the petroleum resources, he asserted, the United States will be without oil in five years. This catastrophe will be the direct result of frenzied competition among oil companies, and the lack of any system on drilling wells with a view towards conserving the supply.

ANNIE PREFERS JAIL TO HUNTING A HOME.

Sokolosky Woman in Jail So Long She Has No Horror at Staying There.

Annie Sokolosky, who has spent more years in the Centre county jail than any other five women in the county, was discharged last Saturday afternoon and on Sunday afternoon was sent back "on the hill," and local authorities are very much perplexed as to what to do with her.

Annie lived at Edendale, Rush township, and at one time owned and operated a small store in that village. She made and saved a little money but finally deviated from the straight and narrow path. During the past ten or more years she has been before the county court eight or more times, once for larceny, once or twice for assault and battery and four or five times for making moonshine.

Her husband died two years or more ago and during 1926 her house and store at Edendale caught fire and burned to the ground. Annie fixed up an old outhouse and installed a moonshine plant, making whiskey and beer for the thirsty individuals of that section. On March 3rd, 1927, her shack was raided, two stills destroyed and her stock of wet goods confiscated. She was brought to the Centre county jail the next day, bringing with her her bible and prayer book, and at the time made the remark that jail meant nothing to her.

On April 22nd, 1927, she pleaded guilty before Judge Furst and was sentenced to pay a fine of $100, costs of prosecution and one year in the county jail. When her year's term of imprisonment was up Judge Fleming offered to release her if she would promise to go home and be good, but instead of making the promise she declared she would go right back to making moonshine.

She was kept in jail until Saturday when she was released at the request of parole officer Roy Wilkinson. Annie didn't want to go because she said she had no place to go. Mr. Wilkinson gave her two dollars to pay her way to Philipsburg but instead she went out to Harry Dukeman's, on south Water street, and asked Mrs. Dukeman to take her in. The latter, naturally, refused to do so and directed her to the borough home. At the home Mrs. Keen declined to take her without an order from the overseers of the poor and finally some one suggested she hunt up Judge Fleming.

Just where she spent Saturday night is not known but on Sunday afternoon she was found sitting on the steps of Judge Fleming's home and was returned to jail. Annie, who is now about fifty-nine years old, has quite a family of children, some of whom are doing very well but she evidently does not want to go to any of them. Just how the county is going to get rid of her remains to be seen.
