Peach Growers Near Waynesboro Will Probably Lose Money on Crop.

Orchardists in this section of the State are faced with the prospect of low prices for their peach crops this year. They point out that of the 15,000 carloads shipped from the South so far this season the average price is between 75 cents to $1 per bushel.

Peach growers here claim that if this price continues they will barely be able to make expenses and some will probably suffer severe losses. Orchardists in this district will start picking the Carmen, Belle and Hiley peaches within the next three weeks. The Elbertas will be ripe the latter part of August.
