Rules Violated in Teaching Young Aviators.

Violations of the provisions of the aeronautics act relating to the teaching of students to operate aircraft has been reported to the department of internal affairs. These reports are now being checked through investigators and, if verified, proceedings will be instituted by the department.

The student-pilot provision in the aeronautics act, which became effective July 1, makes it unlawful for a student to take instructions in flying before he has submitted to a physical examination and been granted a permit by the department of internal affairs.

Attention also is being given to the class of pilots who are permitted, under the law, to instruct students. None but transport pilots may give such instructions, and their planes also must carry a license, issued by the department's bureau of aeronautics. One case is now under investigation where students are alleged to have been receiving instructions from unlicensed pilots flying unlicensed planes. James F. Woodward, secretary of the department of internal affairs, and chairman of the State Aeronautics Commission, has directed that a thorough investigation of all complaints be made promptly and offenders summarily dealt with.

"In any cases," said Woodward, pilots who are licensed in the transport class do not have a clear understanding of the law concerning the instruction of student flyers. When their attention has been called to the matter they have seen to it that the students take the necessary physical test. There also have been cases where limited commercial, industrial and private pilots have not had a clear understanding of the air regulations. The error has been called to their attention and they have ceased their activities. It is those who understand the regulations and have ignored them that the department will proceed against."

Transport pilots carrying passengers for hire or reward are now being licensed by the aeronautics bureau. This class must not only carry a Pennsylvania license, but in addition have a certificate of public convenience, issued by the public service commission.

"Well, George," said a country clergyman to an old man who sat by the wayside breaking stones, "that pile doesn't seem to get any less." "No, wicar," replied the old man, "them stones is like the Ten Commandments; yer can go on breakin' 'em, but yer can't get rid of 'em."

LET'S GO 100% STRONG FOR COLLEGE BOND ISSUE.

Centre County Should Start Work Now to Help Her Big Institution of Learning.

Every vote to be cast in Centre county in November should be a "yes" to the proposal for a bond issue for new buildings at The Pennsylvania State College.

In proportion to her wealth and importance, the State of Pennsylvania has invested a smaller amount of public funds in her State College than any other State in the Union.

This statement is one of many facts concerning the Pennsylvania State College that will be distributed to voters of the State in an educational campaign which President Ralph D. Hetzel has announced will be conducted on a state-wide basis up to the election on November 6, when voters will be asked to approve a bond issue amendment of $8,000,000 for State College buildings.

Already under way, the educational campaign is headed by a special committee of trustees under the leadership of Henry D. Brown, a Yale graduate and for many years a State College trustee, and E. S. Bayard, editor of the National Stockman and Farmer. Financing is by prominent men and women of the State who are concerned with the advancement of public education, and by alumni and parents who have organized for the purpose.

For years the need for expansion to meet demands made by the people has been felt keenly at the State College. Thousands of student applicants have been refused admission in the past ten years, and the valuable research and extension services of the college that reach every county and community in the State have been handicapped, all because building is so limited.

The State College plea for buildings through the bond issue method is to be based largely on the fact that this method will provide an immediate and assured means for the construction of buildings, resulting in economies that otherwise might not be available. A definite building program has been completed by trustees and in a period of years is an important factor in efficiency, trustees declare.

Hearty endorsement of the State College bond issue has come from more than a score of State-wide organizations, including the State Grange, the State Education Association, and many farmer and industrial groups. Students and alumni are prepared to distribute information in every county, their goal being not less than a million favorable votes for the constitutional amendment.

Give Reasons for Earlier Season to Shoot Cotton-Tails.

In order that the reasons for the early season on cottontail rabbits for 1928 may be more generally understood by sportsmen, particularly those residing in the southern counties of the State, the Board of Game Commissioners announced today that an earlier season was provided to give sportsmen in the northern counties a little additional hunting, in view of the fact that weather conditions during November are not suitable for good rabbit hunting and since woodcock have for the most part migrated to more southerly regions by the first of the month.

Consequently, to be fair to the southern half of the State, it was felt advisable to extend the season from December 1 to 15, with a six-day-a-week hunting period, thus giving the southern counties an opportunity to hunt rabbits while weather conditions in the northern counties are unfavorable. When the cold and snow set in rabbits hole-up during the day, and hunting them at such times is unsatisfactory.

Since the open season for small game begins on October 15, with a three-day-a-week hunting period, this means that there will be only six legal hunting days during October as against a full fifteen days during December. Granting that the first three day week in October may be comparatively warm, at least in southern counties, it was pointed out that the latter part of the month is often virtually as cold as the first of November.

The early season will permit sportsmen in northern counties to get a good bag, while hunters in the southern counties will have no trouble in getting their sport a little later in the fall. The commission feels that once these reasons are clearly understood the sportsmen protesting the early season in southern counties will be willing to cooperate to the fullest extent.

Beggar School in Moscow Has 8000 Students.

Moscow, Russia—Instruction in the science and technique of begging, given by the beggar's union of Moscow, has produced such excellent results that nearly all the members of the union flatly refuse to give up their profession for jobs, even when work is available. Their average income is from three to five rubles a day—much better pay than any unskilled job they might be offered.

There are approximately 8,000 beggars in the city, of which 61.3 per cent. are professional, and the remainder forced into it by loss of jobs or property.

The number is constantly increased by peasants who come into the city looking for work only to find that the labor market is over-supplied and there are no jobs.

The union, however, doesn't bother with these casuals who would desert its ranks as soon as honest work is offered. It is composed of professionals of all ages and degrees of proficiency. They divide the city into districts and each has his beat which he guards zealously against the infringement of outsiders. The president and officers of the union are paid a percentage of the members' incomes, and their task is to raise the standards of the profession and protect it against amateurs.

Special attention is given by the union to the instruction of blind beggars, children and cripples. They are taught to sing sob songs, to play a few tunes on a dilapidated instrument, and to make the most of physical deformities. "What the properly-dressed beggar will wear" is given serious study.

Even foreign languages are included in the curriculum so that children who beg in front of hotels and theatres can easily spot the foreigners and say, "Mister, please give money."

Static Has Its Uses—Warns Electric Plant of Approaching Storms.

Several electric power plants in Pennsylvania employ the principle of the ordinary radio to warn of approaching storms and are thus given an opportunity of preparing for an increased lighting demand, says the Pennsylvania Public Service Information Committee.

Static electricity, abhorred by radio fans, is utilized to ring an alarm. "Static" is gathered by an aerial and runs down through a device known as a "coherer," which decreases resistance. A simple mechanism then allows the current to vibrate a bell.

Warning is given the electric company from one to two hours in advance of the impending storm and permits the company to prepare amply for the increased lighting demand.

The Federal Radio Commission has before it a petition to permit a radio call to be inscribed on the marker of a woman's grave. Mildred S. Lorenston operated Amateur Radio Station 1 AID in Providence, R. I., up to the time of her death last August. Inasmuch as she was very active in radio, it was decided that this call would not be assigned to any one else. Her sister has written to the commission requesting that the call letter be inscribed on the grave marker with commission authority.
