BARBER SHOP SYMBOLS DATE FROM OLDEN TIMES.

When was the first shave? The whole thing was explained some time ago by a practitioner of the tonsorial art. The gentleman swelled with pride and assumed quite an important air when the question was put to him, and he proceeded in a most painstaking manner to enlighten the questioner.

It seems that Alexander the Great said on the subject, that shaving is no modern art, although it has been given quite a modern twist in these latter years, by the fact that not only men, but women are indulging in the practice or frequenting the barber shops.

It seems that Alexander the Great was the most effective, but when there was a hand to hand combat, as often there was, it was good night almost every time for these fighters of this famed leader. All that was necessary for the enemy to do was to get a good hold on the beard of his adversary then he could give him a whack on the head with a club or a battle axe and it was all over for the bearded gentleman.

Right then Alexander saw the difficulty he was up against and barbers came into their own, and from that time on until the present day barbers have been in clover.

The Egyptians, also, the gentleman informed the writer, were a clean shaven people. In fact some of the more religious of this race used to shave their entire bodies once every three days.

In the far eastern countries, however, the barbers have never been able to make much headway. These people are very fond of beards and hair on their faces, considering it a mark of manhood, and stoutly refuse to have the growth taken off.

At a little later period the barbers in England were given the right to do certain surgical work. This is where the colored barber pole which adds to the color of every business street nowadays found its origin. At this particular period the barbers were more or less of an itinerant profession, and they carried with them a long stick and a bowl. This was used in the prevailing practice of bleeding people for certain ailments.

The party to be bled would hold the stick out with his arm on a level and one end of the stick resting on the ground. The barber would then make an incision in the arm to allow the blood to flow and catch it in the bowl. In this way the stock became streaked with blood and hence the barber's sign of today.

It was just about this time that the barber shop came into vogue and first became a lounging place for the male population, and the center of the town's gossip.

Almost from the beginning, however, the barbers used all kinds of lotions and creams and tonics for the hair, and the present day practice in this respect is just about as old as the trade.

The barbers of these olden times, however, were not equipped quite as well as the men who follow the profession today. The razors used in these former years were made of pieces of flint, shell or the like. Later glass was employed and bronze. The razors were shaped very much like the blade of a hatchet with a curved handle.

The barber who told the reporter all of this interesting story about his trade said that not only had the men of his profession had an important part in the making for good appearance in the male population, but they had their part in affairs of state, in art, in letters and in the drama. All of which he impressed on his hearer which went to show that the tonsorial art was not at all a menial occupation, but one of the very highest callings that can be followed by any man.

Possibly it would have been a little too personal to have asked the gentleman how it came about that the barbers are so well informed, and have acquired such a love for conversation. He probably could have offered a good explanation for this also, but the reader can very probably guess how this all happened, and will be content with reading this bit of interesting history with regard to barbering, and how it happened to come into vogue.

THE BELL COMPANY REDUCES SERVICE CHARGES.

Service connection charges, which apply when a telephone is connected or moved or when there is a change in the type of instrument, have been substantially reduced by The Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania for all residence and for certain classes of business telephones, according to Jesse H. Caum, manager for the company here. The new rates became effective last Saturday (September 1) and represent a reduction of approximately a quarter million dollars annually.

The new schedules provide for reductions ranging from $1.00 to $1.50 on various service connection, move and change of instrument charges.

Up to the present time the charge made for installing and connecting a telephone in the residence of a new subscriber was $3.50. The revised charge is $2.50. The same reduction from $3.50 to $2.50 will also apply to moving a telephone from one residence to another.

Installing extensions in both residence and business establishments, according to the new rates, will cost $2.00 instead of the old rate of $3.50.

Material reductions have also been made in the charges for moving telephones from one location to another at the same address, as well as for changing from one type of instrument to another.

The moving of the instrument will cost $2.00 instead of $3.00 and the charge for changing an instrument has been reduced from $3.00 to $1.50.

Telephone engineers have estimated during this year also about 190,000 new telephones will be connected in Pennsylvania, and that this number will continue to increase annually. This is exclusive of the moves and other changes that will be affected by the new rates.

Troop B Riders Win Second Place at Altoona Horse Show.

The crack riders of Troop B, 52nd machine gun battalion, won second place and several cups in the Altoona horse show, on Monday, Labor day. They scored a total of 32 points to 34 for Company A, of the mounted engineers, of Altoona. Troop A, 104th cavalry, of Clearfield, was third with 30 points.

Private E. T. Garbrick, of Bellefonte, won first in the privates jumping class. His horse cleared all the hurdles then stopped at the brush jump. At the tug on his rein the animal reared, took a leap and landed safe on the other side. As the horse made the jump Garbrick slipped and had to clutch leather to save himself from being unseated. Garbrick won a silver cup in this event.

Lieut. C. W. Roberts, of Bellefonte, won the cup in the officers' jumping class by riding to first place. Lieut. W. A. E. Leitzinger, also of Bellefonte, was second in this event.

Sergt. Lilliedahl, of Bellefonte, took first honors in the musical chair contest and private Garbrick second.

Garbrick was third in the potato race and Lilliedahl third in speed in riding and changing mounts and saddles. Lilliedahl also won the club cup in the Cossack race.

Sergt. Poorman, of Bellefonte, won the Lion's club cup in the two men relay race.

Among the officers officiating at the show were Capt. Ralph T. Smith, Lieut. Herbert H. Beezer, Lieut. C. W. Roberts, and W. W. Gherrity, all of Bellefonte.
