

Your Health,
The First Concern.

"The regulations of the State Health Department call for certain fundamental sanitary rules in connection with automobile tourist camps. And while regular inspections on the part of official personnel materially assist in the proper observance of the regulations, the tourist himself really holds the key to the situation," said Dr. Theodore B. Appel, Secretary of Health, today.

"Camps in Pennsylvania to comply with the rules must afford a safe water supply at all times. The display of the Department's safe drinking water sign is the best indication that this regulation is being observed.

"The grounds must be maintained in a sanitary condition at all times and proper disposition of garbage must be made. This regulation is easily enforced and will not be disregarded by camp operators if tourists refuse to patronize establishments that plainly violate this requirement. And the same may be said for the public toilet facilities which, under the regulations, must be kept clean and free from fly breeding possibilities.

"Other factors such as throwing garbage into a stream or otherwise polluting it is for the most part a matter within the province of the tourist himself, as is also the extinguishing of fires used for cooking purposes.

"Outdoor life in the summer season is one of humanity's greatest boons. Tourist and picnicking camps add much to such possibilities. However, to attain the maximum benefit from such camps both proprietor and patron must use care. Insanitary or unsafe camps can readily backfire in terms of disease and death.

"Therefore, to the camp owner—keep it clean and sanitary, scrupulously adhere to all the rules and regulations. To the camp user—patronize only those camps that can show a clean bill of health and by your own care keep them that way.

"And incidentally, but quite as important, do not throw picnic offal by the side of the road. Millions of dollars have been expended to afford the finest type of highways in Pennsylvania, thousands have been spent to make them safe, but individual interest and care alone will keep them clean. Cooperate!"

"When one is finished reading the sun ads he can not be convinced that the efficiency of that shining orb as a healer and maintainer of health is beyond expression. And this is one time where the excusable extravagances of the average writer of advertisements may be taken for the literal truth. But there are reservations to be considered. In this connection man-made sunlight must be examined carefully.

"Indoor sunlight produced by lamps undoubtedly possess therapeutic virtue. However, two facts need to co-exist before proper results can thus be obtained. In the first place the lamp must be able to give forth ultra-violet rays in sufficient quantities; and secondly, the application of the rays must be guided by one thoroughly experienced in such usage.

"A large number of so-called sun lamps are actually deficient in their advertised qualities; as a matter of fact, only a small minority are capable of producing the necessary rays. Moreover, one who uses an effective lamp without professional guidance is likely to inflict more harm than good upon himself.

"Those whose appreciation of the sun goes beyond the desires for a sun-lamp and is expressed by a few miles of brisk walking in the sunlight, or even moonlight, or no light at all, will in all probability, not need the indoor variety. It is at least worth a try.

"If a real need for the indoor lamp arises, the doctor is the proper person to discover it and guide its application."

"It is quite true and equally as trite that familiarity breeds contempt. However, when contempt takes a toll of 40,000 lives annually in the United States, when it results in many tuberculosis infections and when it causes thousands of infants' death from diarrhea it is time to consider the wisdom of such an attitude," said Dr. Theodore B. Appel, secretary of Health.

"Because it has always been around and because it does not sting are no good reasons for tolerating the fly. Yet one's familiarity with this pest is the biggest reason for the general attitude of indifference exhibited toward it.

"True, much progress has been made against this disease breeding insect. Screening the house, and a sanitary consciousness particularly in urban sections, as well as sweat-the-fly campaigns have done much to limit the fly's disease and death dealing power. However, one has but to step outdoors, even in the cities, to realize that this general enemy of mankind is far from being subdued.

"Exposed garbage and filth in general represent the most potent fly breeding spots. And in this connection it is a shame that, owing to individual carelessness, uncomfortable flies are each year bred to spread their damage among humans."

JUNIOR CLASS LEADS BELLEFONTE HIGH GRADES

A survey of the grades of the four classes in the Bellefonte High school, for the fifth six weeks' period, which ended on Monday, April 22, shows that the juniors continue to hold first place in scholarship.

The Honor Roll is increased by the addition of several seniors and freshmen, but the sophomores are represented by only one—Helen Crust.

The grades, in general, show a slight improvement, owing no doubt to the fact that most students realize the importance of having a high record to withstand the disasters that accompany final examinations.

The honor roll is as follows:

Seniors	Average
Warren Wilson.....	94
Grace Zeigler.....	94
Carolyn Kalin.....	93
Marian Volynch.....	92

Juniors	Average
Eleanor Hoy.....	96
Paul Taylor.....	96

BABE RUTH ADVISES EARLY START IN BASEBALL.

If you would have your son a star ball player, lay the foundation at an early age—that is Babe Ruth's advice.

"Start the kid young. That's the only way he can get in the game," he says.

"If a boy wants to be a good ball player, there's no use waiting until he is around 16 and 18. The grade school is the place to start. The neighborhood gang also offers fine training.

"I got my start as a kid. I liked baseball and I played around home, in grade school and on the neighborhood lots."

WEEDING OF U. S. OFFICIALS IS ON.

Weeding out of federal officials whose records have not been too good has been started by the Department of Justice following Attorney General Mitchell's announcement that offices of all United States attorneys will be investigated.

The process will not be confined to the district attorneys but will extend to the United States marshals, commissioners and others who serve appointive terms in the federal service, it was learned both in the Justice Department and the White House.

The administration is preparing to get reports on all officials who will come up for reappointment. Already many of these officials are serving beyond their appointed time while the Justice Department is being organized.

Names of attorneys, marshals, postmasters and other appointees for minor offices did not start coming out of the White House until the special session which began April 15.

The Postoffice Department already issued stringent instructions as to how appointments will be made under the new Hoover patronage program. The same instructions will be applied by the Justice Department, it is said, except that applicants do not have to qualify under Civil Service for many of the positions.
