

URGE JUNIOR FARMERS TO PREPARE FOR CAMP.

The officers of the Junior Farmers' association of Centre county have begun preparations for the annual camp at Centre Hall during the week of the Grange encampment, the latter part of August, according to W. S. Jeffries, county vocational supervisor.

Last year, only a comparatively small number of boys attended the camp, with the result that it did not pay expenses. This year an effort will be made to induce more of the members to attend. Those in charge realize that the camp comes at a time when farmers can hardly dispense with the help of their boys for a week, and for this reason this year's camp will probably be arranged for only two or three days.

As now proposed there will be a meeting of the boys each day, at which time there will be brief talks on various topics in which the young farmers are interested. In addition there will be a livestock judging contest.

Vocational boys will conduct a project contest in the educational building. It will be conducted according to the rules of the State project contest held each year in Harrisburg, in connection with the State farm products show. Any boy carrying an agricultural project which meets the State requirements can enter. The Grange Association has set aside a sum of money which will be apportioned in attractive prizes for the winners.

All boys who feel certain they will be able to attend the camp this year should communicate with W. S. Jeffries, at the court house, Bellefonte, on or before July 1st.

"LINDY AIR AND RAIL" TICKETS TO COST $350.

A cross-country ticket on the new "Lindbergh air mail line" will cost approximately $350.

The price is announced by the Transcontinental Air Transport Inc., which will start regular passenger service from New York to Los Angeles July 8.

Passengers will travel from New York to Columbus, Ohio, on a night Pullman of the Pennsylvania Railroad. They fly from there to Waynoka, Okla., the next day and spend the second night en route to Clovis, N. M., on a Santa Fe train. The following day they fly to Los Angeles.

On the eastbound trip a similar schedule will be followed.

The $350 will include both train and plane fares, transportation to and from airports, luncheons in the planes and individual insurance. The T. A. T. claims the fee is only twice that of all-rail travel.

COULD YOU QUALIFY AS AN AVIATOR?

Young men and women ambitious to pilot an airplane after the manner of a Lindbergh or an Earhart should first try standing on one foot with their eyes closed for the brief space of fifteen seconds.

If this seemingly simple stunt can be successfully performed there remains a chance that the ambition can be achieved—if the stampee top-plies, he or she can remain air-minded, but only with both feet on the ground.

This "sense-of-balance" test is only one of a series of the prospective flier must undergo before even setting foot in an airplane as a student flier. Others may be more severe, but few weed out as many would-be pilots as the one-foot-eyes-closed test.

Examination of Philadelphians anxious to become pilots is made in this district by Dr. Edward H. Bedrossian, a flight surgeon in the Medical Reserve Corps and whose office is at 800 Central Medical Building at 18th and Chesnut streets. Many Philadelphians of both sexes and of all ages come to Dr. Bedrossian's office high in their hopes of piloting an airplane through the blue skies and leave with heavy hearts knowing they will never feel the thrill of sending a plane through its evolutions.

A few of the rejected candidates, examined under the rulings and tests prescribed by the Department of Commerce, actually have left his office with tears welling in their eyes, Dr. Bedrossian said.

Another preliminary to taking the controls of anything from a sports biplane to a trimotored transport is grasping two strings and trying to "fine up" two upright sticks, which in actual flying might represent telephone poles, hangar roofs or high-tension wires.

A scale gives the score and placing the two sticks side by side represents perfect judgment of distance on the part of the candidate.

Wearing glasses is not necessarily a bar to prospective aviators, Dr. Bedrossian explained. However, all these tests become increasingly rigid without the aid of spectacles, and vision tests must be made and passed according to which of the five grades of pilots is being examined.

The first group is the student, the second the private pilot, then the industrial flier, limited commercial and finally transport pilot. Even successful pilots of the latter two groups must report to Dr. Bedrossian for a thorough examination every six months, and often men who have had many hours of flying are "grounded" by the examiner until their nerves become normal or until they otherwise become fit to fly mail cargoes and passengers.

Applicants get a thorough eye examination, which includes tests for color-blindness, muscle-balance and judgment of distance. In addition, they undergo examination of the nose and throat. The heart tests are important, and also the examination of lungs, joints, bones and glands.

REPORT RECORD NUMBER OF STATE SUICIDES IN 1928.

The suicide rate in Pennsylvania was higher in 1928 than in any year since 1915, while the homicide rate was the lowest since 1915 according to figures just released by the bureau of vital statistics.

In the year, 1255 persons in Pennsylvania ended their own lives as compared with 1182 suicides in 1927. This is the greatest number of suicides ever recorded in one year in the State although the rate is not so high as in some of the earlier years of State registration. Of the suicides in 1928, 1005 were males and 250 females, while 1219 were white and 38 colored. Even in proportion to population there were fewer suicides among the white people of the State.

There were more suicides between the ages of 45 and 54 than in any other ten year age group, but the suicide rate was highest between the ages of 65 and 75. There were five suicides under the age of 15, three boys and two girls.

There were 534 homicides in Pennsylvania as compared with 570 in 1927. The largest number on record was 634 in 1923. Of the victims of homicide 416 were males and 118 females. Classified by color 373 were white and 161 colored. Assuming that four per cent of the population of the State are colored these figures are equivalent to a homicide rate in the colored population ten times that in the white population.

More than one-half of all victims of homicide are between the ages of 30 and 44 with the medium age as 35. There was only one case of infanticide reported although there were six victims under the age of five years.

ONE THIRD FAIL TO PASS AUTO EXAMS.

A summary of the reports of the examining unit of the State Highway Patrol for persons examined for drivers' licenses of whom 18,071 passed and 6227 failed.

In connection with these examinations it was necessary to correct the position of registration plates on 2394 cars in which applicants presented themselves and to have or correct on 4069 cars.

Registrar Benjamin G. Eynon, of the Bureau of Motor Vehicles, said: "The examining units of the Highway Patrol are performing valuable work on compelling car owners to display their license plates so that they are clear and visible and also in correcting defective headlight equipment. The defects found by the examiner demonstrate beyond a doubt that Pennsylvania still has quite a few car owners who are lax or negligent in complying with the equipment provisions of the motor vehicle code."

FOR AND ABOUT WOMEN.

DAILY THOUGHT.

It is only a woman that can make a man become the parody of himself.

—When serving eggs for a meal instead of having to scour each piece of silver separately, try putting some salt and soap in an aluminum pot of hot water and standing all silver in it while you wash the dishes. All stains will remove easily afterwards.

—Colored shoes are in evidence everywhere now in the daytime, not only at the races where greens, reds, blues and even yellows are seen but on Park avenue as well.

—If shoes are too large or for other reasons slip at the heels, glue in a piece of elastic, being careful that no wrinkles are left in it.

—A wide side poke cloche hat for the tailored suit is of navy bakou with striped pique in navy blue and white making a modernistic inset on the downward side. The scarf to complete the effect has a collar portion of the pique with jabot ends of blue crepe de chine, white lined.

—The little boxes of wedding cake should be piled upon a table near the entrance door, so that the guests, when they are leaving, may take them.

—You should send your gifts as soon as you can before the wedding. Two or three weeks, if possible, so that the bride will have time to write you a note of thanks before she leaves on her honeymoon. Yes, the gift is sent to the bride, in her name, at her home—for all wedding gifts belong to her.

—There isn't a rule in the world about the giving of showers. The only theory that governs them is the rule of good taste—that would be good taste for a party of any other kind—and the general idea that naturally would govern such parties.

Most important in this theory of giving showers is to keep in mind the bit of a shadow that often crosses the giving of showers—the accusation that too often they degenerate into "begging parties," too obviously given to "pass the hat."

Usually the gentlemen are not invited to a shower—but they may be asked in "afterward."

Usually the shower is not a surprise to the bride-to-be, but it may be if you wish.

—The higher waistline is no longer a theory. It is now a law. If we are to rely on the authenticity of Paris edicts. Every good designer is sending models here which demonstrate that the waistline is back to normal, and if it isn't, it should be.

There are still a great many exceptions to this rule, of course. Sports costumes employing two-piece dresses still favor the molded hip-line with no indication at the waist to point to its importance. But this, too, Paris designers tell us, will pass. The time is not far distant when every smart dress will feature the raised waistline.

—If this is true word of advice to those women who must on no account adopt this mode, is timely, if you are short of waist and long of limb there is no safer model for you than the long-waisted, straight-lined frock.

A short waist needs skillful camouflage, not emphasis.

On the other hand, if you are too tall you cannot adapt the new lines to your needs too quickly. Indicating the exact line of the waist is an excellent way to break height.

—Paris reports there is a conspiracy on foot to constrict our sartorial freedom. Tight bodices, long skirts and hairpins!

Tight bodices make necessary long, uncomfortable corsets which made our great grand-mothers so unhappy, and women in this country who cherish their freedom should organize a counter-drive against the invasion of "victimizing" effects. The proposed reforms come from those houses in Paris directed by men, the women designers are more lenient, probably because they realize their own liberty is at stake.

—While there is no doubt that the short, tight bodices and long sweeping skirts are a graceful and charming mode, if they revive the constricting corsets of old their charm will be greatly diminished.

The effect of long limbs is doubly enhanced when the waist is unhampered by fettering stays. Only then can there be a feeling of slenderness and grace.

A novel silhouette, exemplified by an afternoon dress in cravatte silk, has been evolved by Premet. It is reminiscent of the modes of 1880 just before the bustle became enormous, and carries a delightful air of pert femininity about it.

Premet presents it in a variety of materials, but it is especially effective in the brown cravatte silk speckled with white. The closely fitted bodice buttons up the back, while the skirt fullness is achieved through many gathers just below the hips. The collar and cuffs are white organdie.

—Combine a half cup of ice water, two tablespoons of sugar and two tablespoons of lemon juice; and pour into a quarter cup of chilled milk. Whisk thoroughly and serve very cold. A lemon drink is an ideal thirst quencher, you'll find.

Here's a recipe for Lemon Sauce which can be used over a steamed pudding a cottage pudding, or which may even glorify the remnants of yesterday's cake. It would be a good idea to add this recipe to your collection of sauces: Mix a half cup of sugar and a tablespoon of cornstarch thoroughly. Add a cup of boiling water, gradually, stirring constantly. Boil five minutes. Remove from the fire, add a tablespoon of butter, the grated rind of one lemon, a few
