STATE BANKERS APPROVE STATE COLLEGE METHODS

Continued agricultural success in Centre county and all Pennsylvania rests largely upon farmer cooperation with county farm agents and the agricultural extension service of the Pennsylvania State College, according to N. E. Robb, treasurer of the Bellefonte Trust company, and H. L. Ebright, cashier of the First National bank of Centre Hall, who spent the past week-end at State College attending the annual summer meeting of the agricultural committee of the Pennsylvania Bankers' Association and the committee's key bankers from every county in the State.

For three days Mr. Robb enjoyed the atmosphere of college research and extension activities and declares that he was greatly impressed with the service that the College is rendering the people of the State in the field of industry as well as agriculture.

"We could not help but realize the economic value of agricultural research and the well-organized extension service of the College which takes the new discoveries right to the farmers," he said. "We found at this meeting that the College is doing excellent work. It is of such calibre that bankers there agreed that by continuing to urge farmers to take advantage of the State College extension service they can insure a prosperous agriculture for any community. In other words, farmers may be prosperous in proportion to the cooperation they seek from the county agent who represents the extension service."

Although the visiting bankers saw but a fraction of the college research work and heard only a few phases of the agricultural extension program that serves 65 counties, they saw and heard enough to convince them that the banker-farmer co-operation as practiced upon recommendation of the State association's agricultural committee is well arranged and is bringing results. "It is the aim of the banker committee to urge banks to encourage farmers to follow modern methods," Mr. Robb said, "and it is this type of farmer who gets encouragement when he calls upon the bank." During the past year over 500 Pennsylvania banks cooperated in over 35 different kinds of farm projects, most of them with the assistance of college extension representatives.

In making their tour of the agricultural school and experiment station, the bankers heard of forestry problems for farmers, how scientists search for vitamins, proper feeding of dairy cows, how poultry is raised in confinement from hatching time to maturity, experiments in control of insect enemies, hothouse lamb production, importance of organic matter in orchard soils, potato production employing only mechanical power, and investigations in the control of potato diseases.

With this fund of research information they then learned from extension specialists how they take this information direct to the farmer and put it into actual practice. College men and women explained farm accounts, boy and girl club work, and the application of vitamin information in human foods. It was just like going to college for an intensive short course.

W. S. McKay, president of the First National bank, of Greenville, chairman of the bankers' agricultural committee, declared at the conference that State College has a great future and that the interests of the State of Pennsylvania will be materially advanced by the growth of the institution. Walter W. Wilson, of the First Milton National bank, vice-president of the State Bankers' Association, complimented the committee on its work. C. F. Zimmerman, president of First National bank of Huntingdon, secretary of the association, told of the committee's activities in the past seven years, including five tours to agricultural sections and two conferences at the College. College speakers included E. S. Bayard, of Pittsburgh, a member of the board of trustees; A. O. Moore, executive secretary to president Ralph D. Hetzel, and E. K. Hibbsman, assistant to the president, who was in charge of the program and gave an interesting history of Pennsylvania agriculture.

STATE PRISONS ARE NOT OVERCROWDED.

In a statement made at Harrisburg, last week, Mrs. E. S. H. McCauley, head of the State Welfare Department, avers that State prisons are not overcrowded. After giving figures on the eastern and western penitentiaries she stated that on July 1st the Rockview farm prison had a population of 817 in housing facilities of one cell block with 500 cells each, large enough to accommodate two inmates. There is also a psychopathic ward at Rockview which can accommodate forty inmates.

The Welfare Department does not approve the policy of lodging two inmates in a cell, but at Rockview circumstances are so nearly normal with the work furnished on the farm, in the truck garden, the cannery, the forest tree nursery and the construction activities, that the men are together at night only, and not lodged in the cells for long idle periods.

MANY POTATO GROWERS HELP DEDICATE HOSPITAL.

Pennsylvania's first potato exposition drew more than six thousand visitors to the Pennsylvania State College last week. The event was sponsored by the Pennsylvania Potato Growers' Association, and ran from Monday until Thursday.

Dedication of the college hospital, built with funds raised by potato growers of the State, occurred Monday evening. Speakers of the occasion were: Dr. R. D. Hetzel, president of the college; A. L. Hacker, county agent of Lehigh county; Dr. J. P. Ritenour, director of the college health service; Dr. E. L. Nixon, research plant pathologist of the agricultural experiment station, and Martin S. McAndrews, Penn State athletic star from Scranton.

Three programs were run simultaneously each forenoon. On the production program there appeared Dr. W. J. Spillman, of the United States Department of Agriculture; K. W. Lauer, of the State Bureau of Plant Industry; Professor J. B. R. Dickey, E. L. Nixon, J. S. Cobb, and L. T. Denniston, of the college agricultural staff. Marketing talks were given by George A. Stuart, director of the Pennsylvania Bureau of Markets, Harrisburg; C. H. Lehman, Pittsburgh; H. A. Baum, New York City; A. R. Black, Chicago, and W. T. Doyle, Chicago. Speakers on the consumption program were R. Bruce Dunlap, agriculturist, Pennsylvania Department of Welfare, Harrisburg, and Miss Ethel Jeffers, extension nutrition specialist of the college.

Dr. C. G. Jordan, secretary of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, spoke at the formal opening of exhibits and demonstrations Tuesday afternoon. More than one hundred exhibits of potato machinery, lime, insecticides, fungicides, fertilizers, insect diseases, potato soils, varieties, conveyors, loaders, picking tables, packages, bags, grades, storages, processed potatoes and potato by-products. Equipment for the preparation of potatoes for table use, including peelers, slicers, cubers, mashers, mixers, and deep fat fryers were featured. Demonstrations were made of all types of field operations, grading, packing, inspecting, and the preparation of potatoes for the table.

A business meeting of the potato growers' association was held Tuesday evening, followed by an entertainment program under the direction of Professor W. R. Gordon, extension rural sociologist of the college. Wednesday evening Strickland Gillilan, nationally famous humorist, lectured on "Down with Potatoes," prepared especially for the occasion.

During the exposition a book containing "77 Ways of Using Potatoes" was distributed to all of the visitors and they also received a circular of "Potato Grading."

HOOVER APPOINTS "WET" AMBASSADORS.

The President seems to be selecting men of banking experience for some of the important diplomatic posts abroad. Banker Dawes will smoke his American tobacco at the Court of St. James but drink no Bass ale Scotch whiskey or English beer. The second important appointment of ambassadors is the selection of John W. Garrett, of Baltimore, to go to Rome. While a banker, Mr. Garrett has had a wide experience, and part of it in Rome. He is part owner of a Baltimore newspaper. Though he comes from what is known as "wet territory" he probably will fall in line with a dry program because of Mussolini. Hardy, however, will Senator Edge do this if he is finally sent to Paris, for he is a rabid "wet" and the latter city is not favorable to prohibition Americans. Too much money is involved in French wines. This equation of personal profit affects the Parisian as the Washingtonian. One thing we in this country have noticed is that whereas the Washingtonian, who has reasonable respect for the purity of his water supply, always used to take his drink "straight," the Frenchman dilutes his wine with water he warns you from drinking. But finances are more important than liquor in our relationships with these countries.

HOME MADE WINES MAY ESCAPE DRY BAN.

Beverages made from fruits grown on one's own land for home consumption must be proved to be intoxicating, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals ruled. The presence of more than one half of one per cent alcohol is not a proof of the intoxicating qualities of the beverage, it was said. Sam Picalas admitted he made sixty gallons of wine containing five per cent alcohol but insisted it was not intoxicating and the District Court said it came within the National Prohibition Act. The Circuit Court reversed the verdict of guilty returned by the District Court and remanded the case for new trial.

BELLEFONTE COOKS ELECTRICALLY

... here is why!

You have all afternoon "off" ... when you cook electrically

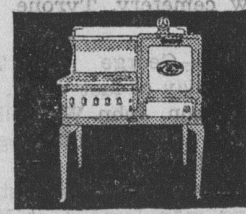

Leisure to enjoy the out-of-doors ... to keep up with the new books ... to be a companion to your family ... comes with an electric range. By relieving you of all responsibility for tending the cooking, it lifts one of your irksome household burdens.

After you have set the clock and heat regulator on an electric range, you can be out of the kitchen all afternoon. Your oven cooks as economically, as efficiently and deliciously, as if you personally supervised the cooking.

In addition, both meats and vegetables go farther when you cook them electrically. Because the oven is tightly sealed, very little evaporation takes place.

Richly flavored juices and important food elements are retained. And your family will say they never ate better meals. Cook electrically for economy!
