DAUGHTERS LEFT OUT OF MRS. BARRY'S WILL.

The following item of legal intelligence appeared in Sunday's Philadelphia Inquirer:

Relics and family heirlooms, including a china pitcher more than 150 years old and a musket used in the Civil war, are disposed of by the will of Mrs. Matilda C. Barry, probated before Register Campbell. Mrs. Barry, who died August 25 in Germantown Dispensary and Hospital, bequeathed the pitcher to Dorothy Gearhard and to Edward W. Barry, "the musket his father carried during the Civil war." Several friends are remembered by the will and the balance of a $2000 estate is given her sons, Edward L. and James E. Barry.

Mrs. Barry, for many years, was a resident of Bellefonte prior to going to Philadelphia. In addition to the two sons mentioned above she has two daughters living in Philadelphia, Mrs. E. H. Nace, and Miss Clara, who is employed in the Federal Reserve bank, and friends of the family here are naturally surprised that neither of the daughters are mentioned in the will of their mother.

As to the two sons, the present whereabouts of James are unknown while Edward is still possessed of the roving spirit that characterized him as a boy, and does not remain long in any one place.
