

GORDON TYSON'S VERSION OF IT

"I had been out back of Howard sitting some patients and was returning home by way of Howard, when right in front of the Howard bank cashier Thompson of that institution rushed out and stopped me, saying that my brother's bank had been held up and robbed. I headed for Beech Creek at once, but just as was leaving Howard I remembered that Thompson had told me the robbers were headed west and if I should meet them I had no gun to stop them. A touring car was approaching so I stopped it. There were two men in it and I asked them if they had a gun. The one whom I addressed was very deaf and couldn't understand what I wanted for some me. Finally he said yes and opening a satchel handed me a Colt's automatic. This was just about halfway between the last house in Howard and the milk station. Then I saw what I thought was the bandits coming down off the viaduct over the flood at great speed. I jumped behind my car and when they came I commanded them to stop. They fired breaking the glass in the door of the driver's side and grazing his arm. And two shots came whizzing me from their car and one was pretty close to my nose for I felt it heard it both. Then I handed the revolver back to the strangers and decided to follow the robbers. In Howard I called for volunteers and no one would go with me. Bill Weber loaned me a double-barreled shot gun and five shells loaded with buck-shot then Frank Williams said he would go along if I waited until he got his gun. Frank got his gun, shot gun also and we took after the robbers. When we got up to the viaduct at about Eagle I didn't know whether the robbers had taken the Marsh creek road or gone right on toward Milesburg. I decided to go that way and the way we bumped over that grading was a fright. About two miles from Milesburg we met a state cop. He told us the robbers did not come that way. Then I figured that if they had taken the Marsh creek road they might try to get across onto the highway to Snow Shoe so I headed for it through Milesburg, on to intersection and from there to the viaduct above Runville. I posted Williams there to watch the Yarnell road that comes down to a highway just at the side of Furl's use. Then I went down to Bennet's store to telephone to Beech Creek to find out how much money had been stolen. They told me there were sure $9000 were gone but didn't know how much more. Then I started back up the road and heard shots and the crash of the car. When I got up there two of the robbers were gone and one was still in the car. I commanded him to get out of that car and come towards us with your hands up because I've got you covered. When he made no move I made the demand a second time. There was no response to it either. Then I told Williams to shoot, but he said he wouldn't. I fired one load of buck-shot at him and the second. After the second shot the door of the car opened and he slumped out onto the running board and rolled onto the concrete.

Side of the bandit car at which Williams shot. It shows 42 shot marks, which indicates that Williams' marksmanship was good.

Keeping him covered with the gun I approached where he was lying and I then said: 'If you tell me where you're hurt I'm willing to help you. This he made no reply. After we discovered he had the money on him I sent someone to my car to dump the medicine out of my satchel and bring it up to put the money in it. That was about all there was to it.

Just two tickets were sold at the Bellefonte passenger depot for today's excursion to Chicago, Ill., while eighty-three people came to Bellefonte on the excursion from Philadelphia, on Sunday.

THE STORY OF FRANK WILLIAMS, THE MAN WHOSE SHOT STOPPED THE FLIGHT OF THE BANDITS

Frank Williams is the man who actually frustrated the escape of the bandits. It was the shot from his gun that made the driver of the fleeing Packard duck just enough to lose control and crash the car into the culvert coping. He is a modest, self-effacing carpenter who lives next door to William Weber on the western end of Main street, Howard. He is the only one in that place who volunteered when Dr. Tibbets called for someone to go on the chase of the bandits with him. We shall let him tell his own story, as he told it to us at his home at noon on Monday. So far as the facts are concerned it is as follows:

"I was at home when Mrs. Weber, our neighbor, came across and said that the bank at Beech Creek had been held up and the robbers were headed this way. Almost immediately the street seemed to be full of people. I went in and got my gun and came out into the yard and somebody said you'd better get behind that tree (the tree is just on the western line of the Williams yard) so I got behind the tree and just then the car came along. I noticed that the back window on the left hand side was broken but I wasn't sure they were the bandits. Some one asked me why I didn't shoot. I didn't shoot because I was not sure of the car and there were women standing everywhere. My mother and my wife were out on the lawn and if I had shot the robbers would have returned the fire and someone might have been killed while I was safe behind the tree.

Then Dr. Tibbets came along and stopped in front of Dr. Kurtz's house and asked for someone to go along and chase the robbers. I was dressed just as I am, overalls and no hat and I said I would go. We went up over the Valley road to Milesburg and on up to the Furl place where Dr. Tibbets told me that the robbers were likely to come down the road at the side of the house we stopped at. We waited there probably 20 minutes then the Doctor told me to watch that road and he would go down to the telephone at the next farm below. I took up a position at the end of the house where I could see up the road and the corner wall would protect me from being seen. It was about five or ten minutes after the Doctor left that I saw the car coming down the hill. I was sure of it then for it was the same one that went through Howard. Then I got behind the wall under the front porch and waited for them to come down within range. I had only No. 6 chilled shot in my gun. I am not sure but I think I was down on one knee when I shot. The car had turned down the highway, was picking up speed and was almost in a direct line between me and the barn. There was only one shot back at me from the car.

After I shot everything happened so fast that I couldn't actually say just what made the car run into the culvert. I didn't see how the fellow on the back seat (Kline) got out, but a man on the front seat on the driver's side (Shope) did get out the left side door onto the concrete, walked over the culvert and went down through the ditch into the field. Then I saw the big fellow running very fast about half-way across the field toward the Snow Shoe railroad tracks. The other one (Shope) was going in the same direction, but very slow. He was just walking, I could have shot at both of them, but bird-shot was no good for that distance. Then Doctor Tibbets and another man came in a Chevrolet and stopped just behind where the Doctor had parked his car above the intersection of the roads. It was from there that he fired twice at the fellow who seemed to me to be sitting on the right hand side in front. A little bit after the second shot the door came open and he slid down onto the runboard and rolled off onto the concrete.

I didn't notice Dr. Tibbets stopping the show man's car and I don't know just who was the first to reach the fellow lying on the road but he was there all right and he had the money on him for we got it all and piled it onto Dr. Tibbets arms until it fell off. Then someone got his medicine satchel and put it all in there. There was $12,710.00 of it because the Doctor and I brought it back and that's what it counted up down at the bank."

GORDON TYSON'S VERSION OF IT

Gordon Tyson is a young married man who lives about one-sixth of a mile due west of Bennet's store at Runville. He works at the Titan Metal plant in this place, but was at home last Thursday because his wife, who has not been in good health for a year or more, was a bit worse than usual. He told the Watchman what he saw and heard in such a clear, candid way that we regard it as probably as little warped by the excitement of the moment as any description of what actually did happen that we heard. He said:

"I went out to Bennet's store about noon to look for the mail man. I had been standing there quite a time when someone spied him down the road. When he came up I talked to him for a few moments and during that time a car came down the road, stopped and a man got out of it. He started talking pretty loud about something but I didn't hear what it was about because I was asking the mail man about a parcel I was expecting. Then I heard the stranger say something about robbers and I took notice. He said the Beech Creek bank had been robbed and the robbers were headed this way. He was carrying a doubled barreled shot gun and went in to the store to telephone. I followed in to see how much money had been taken because after he left the telephone Irv. Bennet asked him how much they got and he said $9,000.00. He then said the robbers are headed this way and everybody ought to get their guns and get out after them. He was looking right at me by that time and I said I would go 'long if he waited 'til I went over home and got my gun. I went over and got my shot gun, slipped pumpkin ball shells into it and went back to the store. Then the Doctor (the stranger Tyson had been speaking of was Dr. Tibbets) got into my Chev and we drove up the road to the Furl place. I was thinking a lot of things and that probably accounts for my driving right past the wrecked bandit car and on to just beyond the Yarnell road where I stopped right behind what I later found out was Dr. Tibbets' car.

On the way up I didn't hear any shots or a crash and I didn't see any men running across the meadow from where the wrecked car was standing. When we got there there were no other cars in sight but the bandit car, a little Ford that left right away, and Dr. Tibbets' car. When we stopped the Doctor jumped out and wanted to run right down to where the fellow was sitting in the car. I said don't do that, you don't know what he might have in his hands. Then the Doctor jumped to the hillside of my car and drew a bead on him. He was shaking a good bit though and he said what you said he said about getting out of the car and coming with his hands up. As I saw the fellow he seemed to be sitting right in the middle of the car. At least that's the way it looked through the back window and I thought he tried to turn his face towards us when the Doctor first called to him. When I saw that I thought he'd had hurt and couldn't get out. The Doctor called the second time and again I thought I saw the fellow try to move. Then the Doctor fired and he did move a little. The Doctor fired the second load and the fellow seemed to move over to the left a little and then the door swung open and in a little while he sort of slid down onto the running board and then rolled off onto the concrete and laid very still.

Just then a car came down the road and the Doctor stepped around my car and waved for it to stop. It didn't get stopped and it was pretty near down to the wreck. There was a man and a woman in it, the man who took the money off the fellow. Then a lot of cars came. I don't know who all were in them. We got the money off the fellow and put it in Dr. Tibbets' satchel and then he was put in my car and "Red" Bennet and I started for the hospital with him. All the way he moaned for a drink of water. I didn't think he ought to have water if he was going to the hospital, but then I thought again that he was badly hurt for there was dried blood about his mouth and nose and we stopped at Davidson's and got him a drink, but he couldn't take it. He was lying on his back on the back seat, but moaned terrible and wanted to turn over.

"Red" tried to help him to turn but he must have been bad hurt for he moaned whenever "Red" tried to help him. We carried him into the hospital. He couldn't do anything to help himself. Mr. Meek, I think he spit a little piece of his lung up there on the concrete for I saw a little piece of bloody stuff. You know what a chicken lung looks like. Well, I do and that's what I thought when I saw it.

ARTHUR BENNET CORROBORATES TYSON

Arthur Bennet, known about Runville as "Red" was in the car with Tyson and helped take Delaney to the hospital. Arthur told the writer: "All the way in he moaned and seemed to be in awful pain. I was sitting in the front seat with Tyson and tried to ease the fellow by putting my hand under his head when we went over bumps. I knew he was badly hurt and I thought he might die before we got there so I told him I was willing to do anything I could and was there anything special he wanted. He just kept moanin' and talking about his mother. He said his name was Williams and finally he said it was George Williams. He said his mother lived on Coulter street, Pittsburgh. At least that's the way I understood it.

STORY OF THE MAN WHO RECOVERED THE MONEY

Mr. and Mrs. John Schwemmer, of the Murdock Shows playing in Fort Matilda, this week, were the first at the scene of the bandit car wreck. Their show was at Clarence last week and they were on their way to Bellefonte to buy some stock.

Mr. Schwemmer said: "We were driving along at a moderate speed when just ahead I noticed a wrecked car and what appeared to be a man lying on the road-way, on the left hand side. Then I noticed another man carrying a shot gun come out of a farm yard at the left side of the road. He appeared very much excited and waved the gun at us as a signal to stop. I brought the car to a halt probably ten feet from the man lying on the road. Meanwhile the man with the gun, who later turned out to be Dr. Tibbets, covered the man on the road. At first I didn't know what it was all about, then as the details came out I realized that there had been a bank robbery and one of the bandits was before me.

He was bleeding from the mouth and moaning something awful. Dr. Tibbets said to him 'You darned fool, if you had held up your hands I wouldn't have shot you.' Then the doctor said they had $9,000 of the bank's money and asked me to search the man while he kept him covered with the gun. I noticed his chest was all puffed out like a pheasant and inside his shirt I felt the rattle of bills. I reached in and there was money, money, all packed up like bankers keep it. I pulled out bundles of twenties, tens and ones until Dr. Tibbets' arms were stacked high with it.

Then the Doctor told me to turn him over and search him good. As I did so he moaned and said: 'I've got all the money, don't kill me.' After we got all the money they put the fellow in a Chevrolet car and the Doctor told me and my wife to follow it in to the hospital at Bellefonte so if anything happened we would be on hand to help.

Dr. Tibbets said 'get him there as quick as you can for he might die before a confession can be gotten from him and notify someone in town so there will be a witness. When we reached Bellefonte Mrs. Schwemmer saw a man near the Presbyterian church, who turned out to be a Methodist preacher (Rev. Homer C. Knox). He went to the hospital with her and sat by the bedside of the man for several hours. Mrs. Schwemmer was there, too, and said that just before she left she noticed his fingers getting blue and was sure he was going to die because she had seen another tragedy in which such signs pointed to the death that followed.

The Schwemmers both said that when they got on the scene it was about 1:20 and that the other two bandits were not anywhere in sight. They also said it looked to them like the man had been thrown out of the car when it was wrecked and was lying just where he landed. Mr. Schwemmer said that while there was no gun on Delaney when he searched him there were about fifty cartridges in his coat pocket. The only gun he saw was in the wrecked car.

A VOICE FROM THE SOUTH.

Hartsville South Carolina Sept. 17, 1929.

Dear Editor: I am forwarding my subscription fee for the ensuing year and hope that you and your family are all well.

The farmers about Hartsville are having poor times. Cotton and tobacco crop prospects are so bad that distress is surely staring them in the face. In my opinion most of them are land poor.

I regret, so much, that Al Smith was not elected for he might have done something toward helping the poor farmers out of their present difficulty.

The Watchman surely is a great comfort to me and many others about here and may it continue in its fearless course of showing up the corrupt practices of those who dominate the G. O. P.

God grant that the Democratic party will stand together, in 1932, firm and unalterable in its determination to seat a man who fears God and knows no creed other than the right, in Washington.

Hope all my old friends in dear Bellefonte are well and happy.

Graciously yours, JAMES A. McCAFFERTY
