AIRMAIL PILOT LIVES

AFTER MOUNTAIN CRASH

Broken Left Arm Most Serious Injury Sustained by Jack Webster, Dean of Airmail Flyers

A broken left arm, the little finger on his left hand broken, superficial cuts and bruises, but still very much alive is Jack Webster, dean of airmail pilots on the New York-Cleveland division of the transcontinental airmail route, after his plane crashed in the Rattlesnake terrain of the Allegheny mountains with sufficient force to reduce it to a pile of junk.

The crash occurred about 2:20 o'clock on Saturday morning and it was eleven o'clock Saturday night before Webster was found and taken to the Philipsburg hospital where, several hours later, he told the story of the crash and his nerve-racking experience to division superintendent Wesley L. Smith and B. P. Lott, of Chicago, an official of the National Air Transport.

According to Webster's story when he reached Bellefonte about midnight, Friday night, it was raining quite hard and he landed on the Bellefonte field. He came into town and got a lunch at a restaurant then returned to the field. The rainstorm passed about 1:30 and it was 2:05 o'clock when he checked out on the continuation of his western trip.

As he struck the Allegheny mountains, however, he flew into a hard rain and sleet storm with freezing temperature. The wings of his plane became so heavily coated with ice that he could not keep it in the air and when he found himself going down he braced for the inevitable crash.

Webster was knocked unconscious and when he finally recovered consciousness it was daylight. He took stock of himself and naturally was surprised and overjoyed to discover that he was still alive, and aside from a broken arm and finger, in pretty fair shape considering the wrecked condition of his machine.

Naturally his first thought, after making sure he could travel, was to get out of the mountain and some place where he could get help to save his cargo of mail, and he started through the woods.

Suffering from shock and weakness, and the pain from his broken arm, the going was slow and tortuous. He would travel awhile then lie down and rest.

Along toward noon he saw planes circling in the air and he knew they were looking for him but he had no way of signalling to them. The pangs of hunger and thirst added to his physical pain almost overcame him and he finally laid down and slept for several hours.

When darkness fell, Saturday evening, he was still in the woods, traveling onward but he did not know where. It was well onto eleven o'clock when he finally tottered out onto the Philipsburg pike, about two and a half miles northwest of the point of his accident.

On reaching the road he slumped down on the bank, thankful that he had made his way out of the woods. He was there only a brief time when he heard an automobile approaching. He managed to signal the driver and the car stopped.

The occupants proved to be Robert Custer, John Wilson and Alice Green, three young people of Philipsburg, who were on their way to the Rattlesnake to join in the hunt for the missing pilot. They quickly loaded Webster into their car and conveyed him to the Philipsburg hospital. Doctors hurriedly examined him and as soon as they determined that his injuries were not critical they called Bellefonte and notified W. L. Smith that Webster was there and not dangerously hurt.

It might here be stated that there were twenty-one sacks of mail and the wrecked plane fell some three or four hundred yards from the fire trail, the nearest spot it was possible to reach by automobile, and the half dozen or so men who had reached the wreck fell to with willing hands and helped to carry the mail out; and it was no easy job, as the ground is thickly covered with a tangled growth of underbrush, so that it was a hard and tiresome job.

In the searching party were superintendent Smith, Mr. Lott, J. C. Tower, of the Department of Commerce; Forrest Tanner, manager of the Bellefonte field, and several score of people from Unionville and the country roundabout. They hunted until darkness fell, Saturday evening, then withdrew and made arrangements to go out Sunday morning with a force of at least five hundred men.

Deputy warden W. J. McFarland, of Rockview, had planned to take out the penitentiary blood hounds in an effort to trace the whereabouts of the missing pilot. To stimulate the search a reward of $250 was offered to the person or party that found him.

But Webster finally found his way out of the woods and that ended Sunday's searching party. Webster who, as stated above is the dean of the airmail flyers, has been in the service most of the time during the past nine years.

His accident, on Saturday morning is the first bad smashup in this mountainous section since Charles H. Ames was killed in a crash on Nittany mountain in October, 1925, four years ago, which is a pretty good record for that portion of the mail route which has been termed "Hell's Acres."

Webster's wife came to Bellefonte on the mail plane from New York, on Sunday afternoon, and was taken to Philipsburg by automobile to be with her husband. According to physicians at the hospital there is no reason why he shouldn't make a speedy recovery from his injuries.

ELEVEN YEARS OF PEACE

CELEBRATED ON MONDAY

Eleven years of peace, the anniversary of the signing of the Armistice which put an end to the World war after forty-one months of carnage and destruction, was duly celebrated in Bellefonte on Monday morning by Brooks-Doll post, No. 33, American Legion, assisted by the Legion Auxiliary, Veterans of Foreign Wars and a large squad of Troop L, N. G. P. Led by the Legion bugle and drum corps the parade marched to the Diamond where they lined up in four ranks just prior to the zero hour, 11 o'clock.

On the stroke of eleven, bells tolled and for two minutes the large crowd stood in silence, which was finally broken by a salute of eighteen guns by a firing squad of Troop L. Post commander Francis Crawford opened the services and prayer was offered by Rev. Robert Thena. Rev. Thena also made the address, a splendid, patriotic talk which was listened to with careful attention by the large crowd of spectators.

In the afternoon the Legion bugle and drum corps led the parade of High school students to Hughes field for the football game, and in the evening the Legion, Woman's Auxiliary and invited guests, to the number of 140, had their annual banquet at the Penn Belle hotel and wound up the day with a dance in the auditorium at Hecla park.

HORSES AND COWS BURN IN LARGE BARN FIRE

Two horses, six cows, all the year's crops and many farm implements were burned in a fire which completely destroyed the large barn on the C. W. Simpson farm, near Pennsylvania Furnace, at an early hour on Sunday morning.

The loss is estimated at $9000, partially covered by insurance. Mr. Simpson has no knowledge as to how the fire originated. It was discovered about 2:30 o'clock in the morning and had already gained such headway that it was impossible to save the stock or anything in the building.

State highway patrolmen have received orders that beginning tomorrow, Saturday, Nov. 16, all persons operating motor cars which do not bear the "approved, inspected" windshield sticker are to be arrested. There will be no extension of time.

BELLEFONTE HIGH WINS

ARMISTICE DAY GAME

The Bellefonte High school football team won the Armistice day conference game, on Hughes field, from Lewistown by the narrow margin of one point, the score being 14 to 13, and it was Lewistown's offense playing that gave victory to the home team.

The day was ideal for the game and the largest crowd ever seen on Hughes field was present to witness the battle between the young pigskin gladiators. Various estimates place the crowd at about four thousand, but they were not by any means all paid admissions.

Lewistown kicked off to Bellefonte and on the second play Capt. Confer made a run of 65 yards through the entire Lewistown team for a touchdown. Shope's attempt to kick the goal was blocked but Lewistown was offside and the point was awarded to Bellefonte.

Lewistown then stiffened its defense with the result that Bellefonte was unable to make rapid progress, but after see-sawing back and forth for some time Confer again plunged over the goal line for second touchdown. Shope kicked the goal.

Lewistown took a brace and through a succession of end runs and forward passes, aided by a costly fumble on the part of Bellefonte worked the ball down to Bellefonte's five yard line where they lost it on downs. Bellefonte attempted to kick out of danger but the kick was blocked and Tallon fell on the ball back of the goal line for a touchdown. Lewistown lined up in formation to kick the goal from touchdown but instead of doing so rushed the ball across for the extra point and the first period ended with the score 14 to 7 in favor of Bellefonte.

This ended the scoring until well along toward the end of the fourth period when Lewistown, through a succession of line plunges and end runs, put the oval over for another touchdown. Again they fooled the Bellefonte players by rushing the ball over for the extra point after lining up for a kick, but the team was off-side and the point was not allowed. Score 14 to 13 in favor of Bellefonte.

That ended the scoring and Bellefonte had the ball almost in midfield when the whistle blew for the end of the game. Bellefonte made 15 first downs to Lewistown's 6 during the game, and outplayed Lewistown most of the time.

Unfortunately there was considerable slugging and roughness during most of the contest. Lewistown was the most aggressive in this respect but Bellefonte was not entirely blameless. In the fourth quarter Capt. Confer was compelled to retire from the field because of an injured shoulder, and several other Bellefonte players had to get out of the game because of injuries.

Just how serious the injuries may prove to be is not known at the time of the writing of this article. Bellefonte will play its last home game of the season on Hughes field tomorrow, with Morrisdale. This, however, will not be a conference game.

BELLEFONTE ACADEMY

The Academy will remain in New York as guests of New York University at the Varsity game tomorrow afternoon. The Academy's last home game on Hughes field will be on November 23rd, when they will meet the Western Maryland Freshmen, a strong aggregation. Regular admission price for this game will be $1.00, with ladies and students 50 cents.

The Academy went over to DuBois, last Saturday, and played the Bingville Independents, winning by the score of 48 to 0.

TO RESUME WORK ON

BELLEFONTE CENTRE

Supplies and machinery are being placed on the ground for resumption of work on the extension of the Bellefonte Central railroad from Struble station to Fairbrock to connect with the old Lewis and Tyrone branch, purchased by Bellefonte Central over eight months ago when it was abandoned by the Pennsylvania Railroad company.

As most of the grading on new section was done last summer it is estimated that the work can be completed in a month or six weeks. As most of the ties and rails are ready at State College the work on laying the track will be started soon as the roadbed is in condition. While it is not likely the road will be completed this winter it will be so far advanced that the work will be pushed through early next summer, when the line will be open through to Tyrone.
