CHRISTMAS FAIRIES FOR THE LITTLE FOLKS

Christmas Fairies, children, Are singing in our ears, Tiny, little, lovely things Bringing Christmas cheer.

Telling dad and mother All your wishes, gay, For toys and books and candies, sweet, To greet you Christmas day.

Old Santie gives each fairy. As it hastens from his shop, A wee, bright, sparkling lightning bug With wings that start and stop.

And to every one it meets or greets, No matter who they be, It's whisper goes so low and sweet: "What do you choose for your tree."

Then dad, he wants a "comfy" chair, With newer lines and grace. And "Chubby" wants a base-ball mask To save his fat, round face.

And "Sallie-Lue," she's all a thrill, To get her doll's house fixed Before old Santa comes around. Or he'll find her in "some mix."

And mother and the other folks, Who live with you alway, Are just too rushed to wish one want-For it's now 'most Christmas day.

Then the little lantern lightning bug Goes "flop,' and rubs his wings, And lo! A light comes sparkling through And shows folks all the things.

That each one wishes for himself. And some, for others, too. Which makes the fairy lightning bug Live in the hearts of you.

And, also, why old Santa With his good wife, Mrs. Claus, Keeps coming back each Christmas To prove their love-thought cause. W. B. MEEK MORRIS, 1929
