

Notice to Subscribers

On copies of the Watchman of January 24 will appear labels that will have been corrected so that they should reflect all payments on subscription and changes of address received at this office on or before Saturday, January 18. In other words, our mailing list will be corrected on the latter day, and every payment on subscription that has been made within the last six weeks should show itself in the dates to which labels on papers of January 24 will be extended.

We are giving this matter unusual prominence for several reasons. First, because we want it to attract your attention and enlist your co-operation to the end that there will be no misunderstanding later.

If your label on the issue of January 24th does not show that proper credit has been given you, please write or call us at your earliest convenience so that corrections can be made that will save much inconvenience later.

We make errors. We try very hard to avoid them, but some creep in occasionally. Because we are conscious of that fact we do not take the position that we are always right. But it is a very laborious job to dig through files and books several years back when a subscriber writes in or tells us that in December, 1926, he or she sent $1.50 for which they did not receive proper credit.

Please check up on us by watching your labels.

The other matter that we want to call attention to is one that concerns only those whose labels do not show that they have paid up to some date in 1929.

As between the Watchman and its subscribers, there isn't a person on its list whom this paper wouldn't trust to the limit. We have the utmost confidence that every subscriber we have who is in arrears will ultimately pay his or her bill. The post-office authorities don't look at it that way, however.

We are anticipating a call, very soon, from Washington that will compel us to list every subscriber who is in arrears one year or more. When that is done we will be ordered to discontinue sending papers to them, or put regular postage on each paper. That means that we will be denied the usual pound rate for newspapers.

In the light of these circumstances and especially since we will correct our list on Saturday, January 18, we are urging those who have just "not thought about it," to send in their remittance by that date if convenient, and, if not, as soon thereafter as possible.

The Democratic Watchman.

STATE POLICE GET TELETYPE

A telephone typewriter to operate as a part of the State-wide communication system planned by the Pennsylvania State Police has been installed in the Galeton police station by E. H. Martin of the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania.

Galeton is one of the 40 cities and towns in Western Pennsylvania being provided with this intercommunication service, which was placed in operation about Jan. 1.

According to the State Police program, approximately 100 Pennsylvania communities will be equipped with these machines for the instantaneous dissemination of police information.

Headquarters for the Western Pennsylvania zone will be located in Pittsburgh in the county detectives' office where both receiving and sending machines will be placed.

From these sectional headquarters information will be flashed over the system to other cities and towns, which will be equipped with receiving instruments only. The outlying stations will be placed in State or municipal police quarters, or some other advantageous point, and will be strategically located with regard to the main highways.

At Harrisburg, which is to be the main headquarters, experts will be maintained to operate the telephone typewriters. The sending machines, which resemble huge typewriters, are equipped with standard keyboard. When the key is pressed electrical impulses are released which speed over a network of Bell telephone wires to the machines at the outlying stations, where the letter or symbol corresponding to the key touched by the operator on the sending apparatus is printed clearly on a sheet of paper.

Switchboards and other equipment will be installed at zone headquarters so that messages may be dispatched to one city only, if desired. The equipment, however, will permit the sending of the same information to all stations, at the same time, at the rate of forty words per minute.

Police in communities served by receiving machines only such as Galeton will telephone to zone headquarters the message they wish to be flashed over the system.

Pennsylvania is the first State to adapt the telephone typewriter to police work on such an extensive scale. It is expected to facilitate the capture of criminals and aid suppression of crime, as it makes possible the broad casting of details of a crime to all important points in Pennsylvania within a few minutes after it has been committed.

The telephone typewriter represents the most modern equipment available for this important phase of police work, and was perfected by scientists of the Bell system only after many years of research and experimental work.

Upon completion of the installation work at Galeton and all other points in the State, the system will be subjected to a series of thorough tests before the service is formally inaugurated.
