

LOST WHITE TRIBE IS FOUND IN INDIA

Discovered in Jungle by Russian Scientist.

Calcutta.—Doctor Jaroslav, a Russian scientist, who has recently returned from a visit to the heart of the faria country in the jungle of India, brings back the intelligence that long lost white race still exists amid the jungles of that section.

Doctor Jaroslav is planning shortly to return to continue his investigations. As a result of his statements scientists and students of history are asking if the Russian has come upon long lost white race.

If so, how long have they been here? What is their origin? Are they descendants of Alexander's veterans, who entered India after their unparalleled succession of triumphs over the Persians more than 2,000 years ago?

Alexander the Great, king of Macedonia, in 327 B. C., invaded India. He reached the Hydaspes, now known as the Jelum, and there defeated and took prisoner Porus, an Indian king, hence he penetrated as far as the Tarras, where his weary troops refused to proceed farther. Alexander was then forced to order the retreat, and sailed down the Jelum with some of his troops, while the remainder marched in two divisions along the banks. So much is history.

A surmise, which almost amounts to a certainty, suggests that a portion of those troops which were marching on the bank were so worn out and disheartened that they took advantage of the temporary relaxation of discipline caused by Alexander's absence to desert from the main column. They then settled in the pleasant land in which they had found themselves.

It is the descendants of these men, driven and harried from place to place by a succession of invaders, that Doctor Jaroslav contends he has found in the Marrias. They are one of the most primitive peoples of India, who have long been a source of study and bewilderment to ethnologists.

Brazil to Put Heavy Tax on Talking Movies

Rio de Janeiro.—Imposition of prohibitive taxes upon moving picture theaters showing foreign sound and talking films is being sought by Brazilian musicians, who are jobless as a result of the talkies. A bill has been presented to the board of councilmen of Rio de Janeiro providing a tax of one conto (approximately $120) per day each day that a talking film in any language other than Portuguese is presented.

The musicians hope that such a tax will make it necessary for theaters to resume showing silent films and result in the music makers returning to their places in the orchestra pit. United States made movies would be principally affected, since talkies from other countries have still to be heard here.

The campaign against the talkies in Brazil has stirred public interest, although several prominent newspapers, commenting editorially, have been cold water on the project, asserting such attempts to discourage progress in the movie industry would be exceedingly harmful.

Declaring the talkies have seriously injured dramatic art and threaten to upplant the national language, Floiano de Goes, council member who introduced the bill, believes the only method of combating what he terms "evil" is charging a very high tax.

American Bathing Suits Popular Among Italians

Washington.—One-piece bathing suits, American style, with suntan necks, short trousers, and low cut necks, will be the style at fashionable Italian beaches next summer, according to the Commerce department. Consul Hugh Miller at Milan reported to the department that American bathing suits came into vogue in Italy last year with a degree that took Italian manufacturers by surprise.

Scared Cats Saved

Winnetka, Ill.—With every fire run this millionaire Chicago suburb cost taxpayers $63 during the past year, the chief occupation of the firemen was to rescue babies locked in bathtubs. The second largest number of cats was rescued, while the matter of extinguishing fires was aird.

Woman Born in U. S. Is to Be Naturalized

Nebraska City, Neb.—Mrs. William Lutjemeyer was born in Otoe county and has always resided there, but at least five years must elapse before she becomes a citizen of the United States.

William Lutjemeyer was born in Germany. His father did not become naturalized. William has passed his examinations and is now a citizen, but he was married before he became a citizen.

With her marriage to an un-naturalized person, Mrs. Lutjemeyer lost her citizenship and must go through the formality of becoming naturalized to regain it.

Employment of Glaze for Ornamentation Old

Among a race as gifted as the Chinese, neither the spirit of inventiveness, which originates new objects and processes of manufacture, nor the love of adventure which by means of travel imports them from abroad, were ever wholly absent, and it is often difficult to prove to which of these two agencies any particular novelty owes its introduction. However, as regards glaze, importation from abroad does seem the most likely. For one thing it was a very ancient possession of the West.

Even before the Pyramids rose out of the sands of the desert, a lovely turquoise glaze had been discovered by the Egyptian artisans. And twenty centuries later the dream city of the Pharaoh Akhnaton gleamed like a jewel against a cloudless horizon, the lintel of its gates, the walls of its palaces, the pillars of its temples, the cornices of its roofs inlaid with a fairylke mosaic of multi-colored glazes. From Egypt glaze spread over western Asia into the full pride of Babylon, unless invented there independently, which is quite as likely. While the baked clay of China was still innocent of all luster, Assyrian potentates decorated their architecture with lions and griffins, stepping out majestically in friezes of richly colored glazed tiles. This resplendent art was continued by the Persian king of kings, by the Seleucids and the Arsacids and beyond into the days of Islam.—From "Porcelain Pagodas and Palaces of Jade" by A. E. Grantham.

Holstein Cattle Winter in Luxurious Quarters

Speaking of the winter care given the famous Holstein cattle by the dairymen of Friesland, Holland, the National Geographic society says: "Barn and dwelling are under one roof, which rises high into the sky in order to provide loft space for the immense amount of hay needed as cattle feed during the long winter. The whole gives the appearance of a one-story cottage pushed low into the earth by weight of an immense pointed roof, which reaches above the tops of the tall trees lining the roadway."

"A hall separates the living quarters of the farmer's family from a space set aside for cows, which as a rule is the larger portion of the house. Visitors testify that these barns are spotless and odorless. Each stall is sanded and has a window of its own, inevitably decorated with a fresh white window curtain. Every cow has a bath daily and many of their tails are tied up with ribbon."

A Fair Cop

For years and years and years—no, let us start again: For weary hours the angler sat watching his float. It never moved, save when a ripple of the river made it tremble and raised false hopes in his heart.

Then, with the snort of an enraged bull and the foot-tread to match, the village constable came to him.

"Fishing ain't allowed in this pond," he snapped. "Beat it!"

The fisherman turned bored eyes to him and jerked the hook out of the water.

"I'm not fishing," he replied, with weary sarcasm in his voice. "I'm teaching this worm to swim."

"A-a-r-h!" snorted the policeman triumphantly. "Then come along with me. Bathing ain't allowed in the pond without costumes, and he ain't got one on!"

Wisdom of Antoninus

For a man can lose neither the past nor the future; for how can one take from him that which is not his? So remember these two points: First, that each thing is of like form from everlasting and comes round again in its cycle and that it signifies not whether a man shall look upon the same things for a hundred years or two hundred, or for an infinity of time; second, that the longest lived and the shortest lived man, when they come to die, lose one and the same thing.—Marcus Aurelius Antoninus (121-180 A. D.). "Meditations."

Craze for Hairdressing

In the early Eighteenth century hairdressing in France reached its peak. Literally. Many court ladies wore their hair piled so high that they could not sit in coaches but had to kneel or hold their heads out of the windows. It is said that in Paris in 1730 there were 1,200 hairdressers. They were probably kept busy, since it often took an entire day to dress the hair. However, the women who wore it in the most elaborate fashion had it done only about once a month.—Detroit News.

Cancer of the Skin

Cancer of the skin grows slowly and is not particularly malignant. It is possible to cure practically all individuals suffering from this form of the disease, says the American Public Health association, provided they seek aid at an early stage of the disease.

Two Things to Prize

An old job is like an old friend. We become so accustomed to it that we take its virtues as a matter of fact. We overlook its real value and its possibilities for helpfulness. Treat lightly neither an old friend nor an old job.—Grit.

HEIR OF NAPOLEON DISCOVERED IN PARIS

Teacher Is Daughter of Emperor's Son.

Paris.—The granddaughter of Napoleon Bonaparte, first emperor of France, has been discovered living in a tiny cottage, squeezed in among factories and truck gardens, in a suburb of Paris.

She is Madame Mesnard Leon, a retired school teacher, credited with being the only direct living descendant of the famous Corsican. All Bonaparte princes alive today are descended from Napoleon's brothers. Madame Leon is the daughter of the celebrated Count Leon, who was born of the Emperor Napoleon and Eleonore de la Plaigne.

"The news of my father's birth was received by Napoleon at Pultusk, Poland, when he was preparing the campaign that culminated in the victory of Friedland," said Madame Leon in a press interview. "Napoleon was already thinking of divorcing the childless Empress Josephine, so you can imagine what consequences the news of my father's birth might have had. "But what could Napoleon do? Nothing. Marriage with my grandmother was out of the question on account of the political situation at that time and the wars abroad. The whole of France might have been threatened."

She then related that Napoleon bestowed the latter half of his name on his child, calling him Count Leon. The child grew up to play a colorful role in the social world of that time and gained a reputation as one of the foremost duelists of France.

Madame Leon also revealed that her only son was killed in the World war at Rheims in 1917 at the age of twenty-one. This was the first indication that a direct descendant of Napoleon took part in the World war.

Madame Mesnard Leon had led a quiet but comfortable life. Since 1923 she has lived at Stains, a suburb of Paris, with her daughter, now grown into womanhood.

Sculptor Asks Burial at Mill Montparnasse

Paris.—An old windmill of Montparnasse may become the final resting place of Emile-Antoine Bourdelle, famous French sculptor, who died some months ago.

A committee of artists is at present investigating the suitability of the mill as a tomb for one of France's greatest sculptors of all time, following the request of his widow that he be interred there. This was a wish that he had often expressed to his friends, explaining that he wanted to be buried in Montparnasse near the studio where he achieved many of his best works.

Centuries old, this mill is no longer used to grind flour as in the middle of the Eighteenth century when it was the property of the Jesuit order. On the expulsion of the Jesuits in 1762 the building changed hands and its new owners converted part of it into a bistro where sparkling wines were sold. Now it is a mere storehouse and the great flapping arms which turned in the wind have been stripped off.

In 1824 the ground around the mill became the cemetery of Montparnasse and the mill was used as a home for the grave digger. Since then many unsuccessful attempts have been made to convert it into a historical monument under the care of city authorities.

Special Vaccine Cuts Infant Mortality in Two

Paris.—A special vaccine, reducing the mortality among newly born infants virtually 50 per cent, has been used in 210,000 experimental cases since 1924. Dr. Albert Calmette told the Academy of Science.

So successful have these trials been that Pasteur Institute, of which Doctor Calmette is subdirector, has created a special laboratory for its preparation. It will be distributed free to physicians and midwives.

Eight Mice Are Found With Home in Radio Set

Rahway, N. J.—Many things have come out of radio sets, but Albert G. Avery got a mother mouse and a litter of seven young mice out of his.

Avery started to investigate a short circuit in his set and found that it resulted from the presence of two dead mice which had been electrocuted by the bare wires. The mother and remaining five were comfortably settled in a nest which she had made in the built-in speaker.

Soviet Miners Burn 4,000 Ikons at Meet

Moscow.—In a gigantic anti-religious demonstration of 15,000 coal miners in the district of Gorlovka, Don basin, 4,000 ikons were burned in a huge bonfire. The ikons were taken from numerous churches in the district, all of which were ordered closed for worship and will be turned into clubs. The miners proudly sent a telegram about the celebration and bonfire to Joseph Stalin as general secretary of the Communist party.

THE TREE TOAD

A tree toad loved a she toad. That lived up in a tree. She was a three-toed tree toad. But a two-toed toad was he. The two-toed tree toad tried to win. The she toad's friendly nod; For the two-toed tree toad loved the ground. That the three-toed tree toad trod.

But really the two-toed tree toad tried. He couldn't please her whim; In her tree toad bower. With her V-toe power. The she toad vetoed him. Anonymous.

Free SILK HOSE Free

Mandel's Knit Silk Hose for Women, guaranteed to wear six months without runners in leg or holes in heels or toe. A new pair FREE if they fail. Price $1.00. YEAGER'S TINY BOOT SHOP

A PITTSBURGH dealer telephoned a farmer near Dunbar, Pennsylvania, offering to buy seven steers at a very satisfactory price. The drawback was the long truck haul, made particularly difficult by a recent heavy snowfall. Learning that the dealer was in the market for additional cattle, the farmer then telephoned his neighbors, who pooled sufficient stock to warrant shipping by freight from the nearest railroad.

A Bank's Standing

There are three determining factors in a Bank's standing:

- The Reputation of its Officers and Directors
- Its Capital and Surplus
- Its Resources

As to this Bank—the first of them will have to take care of itself.

The second shows—Capital and Surplus $542,000. Of this amount $342,000 is surplus. Much greater than the average.

The third shows Resources of $2,800,000. Enough to insure the proper consideration of, and ability to help, projects that promise to increase the well-being of the community and the proper needs of individuals.
