ONE BILLION DOLLARS HIDDEN OR HOARDED.

Some where in America more than $1,000,000,000 in real money is hidden hoarded, or lost.

The Treasury Department is hunting it. The prospects of success in the search are altogether uncertain. Many, many millions, perhaps hundreds of millions, of dollars will never be found.

The disappearance of this vast pile of cash was disclosed today in response to inquiries at the Treasury as to what become of the old paper currency which now has almost completely vanished from circulation.

When the Treasury began issuing the new small currency on July 10, 1929, the books showed $5,120,000 old style paper money outstanding. The Treasury at once began retiring the old bills as fast as it was possible to replace it with the new currency. For a while the Bureau of Engraving, operating day and night, was unable to meet the demand.

Until the first of the year, it was the policy of the Treasury to retire only the ragged and dirty bills which were plainly unfit for further use. Since then all the old currency received has been retired and only new style bills issued.

In spite of the extraordinary speed in disposing of the old currency the latest check made after the abnormal demand for the new currency had subsided, showed an astonishing amount of the old bills outstanding. On March 31, the records showed $1,336,000,000 of the large bills some where in the hands of the public. This included approximately $60,000,000 in one dollar bills. Since that date the amount retired has been comparatively small.

The Treasury has several theories concerning the disappearance of the money. First, it must be remembered the record of July 10, 1929, covered the entire period during which the old bills were issued. The Treasury, of course, had no way of computing the amount of old money outstanding except by calculating the amount issued. It had to be prepared to hand back a dollar in the new money for every dollar it had ever issued of the old money.

Since only about $60,000,000 of the old currency outstanding is in one dollar bills, it is apparent that a large proportion of the remainder must be in bills of the very high denominations. The Treasury assumes, therefore, that some of this money must be in the hands of banks holding them temporarily for reserves.

Probably a sizable portion of the old bills is being hoarded. Many people probably have one or two as souvenirs and will not turn them in until they become "broke" and are compelled to spend them. Many more, however, probably have been stuffed into strong boxes and hidden away by persons with the strange instinct for playing the miser. That kind of lost currency may eventually turn up after the hoarder dies and his estate is divided.

If past experience is a guide, the Treasury probably will be redeeming hoarded currency for the next sixty years. For instance, it is still retiring the old "postage stamp" money of the five-and-ten-cent size from Civil War days at the rate of $2 to $3 worth a week.

Perhaps a large part of the vanished currency has been entirely destroyed. The Treasury calculates that considerable money "goes up in smoke" every year in fires and some goes down to the bottom of the sea in ship wrecks.

As fast as the old money comes in it is subjected to "the process of retirement" under the supervision of a committee of seven. That process consists of cutting the money in two, shifting the parts around so that there is no possibility of their being joined again and then dumping the mass into ten huge macerators which reduce them to pulp.

For several months the macerators were worked overtime, two at the Treasury and the others at the Bureau of Engraving. Ninety extra employees were required to feed the bills into them. But recently the incoming tide of old money dropped to such an extent that the force has been cut to normal.

Meanwhile no one in the Government is worrying about the lost billion of dollars. Whatever eventually fails to turn up for redemption will be just so much "velvet" to Uncle Sam.

CUB BEARS AND DEER SUFFER IN FOOD SHORTAGE.

John B. Ross, district supervisor of the State Game Commission, is the custodian of three bear cubs which were discovered by employees of the commission. One was found near Emporium and two in Elk county.

The three cubs were in emaciated condition. Scarcity of food in the fall forcing the young animals to hole up before having accumulated enough surplus fat to last during the long period of inactivity is blamed for their condition.

Officials are investigating food conditions in the Pike county district where 31 dead fawns have been found.

Preliminary investigations indicated that the young deer had starved to death due to shortage of natural forage. No indications of any contagious or communicable disease was found.

1037 KILLED IN AIR CRASHES SINCE 1927.

Officially reported airplane accidents were responsible for 1,037 fatal injuries from Jan. 1, 1927, to Dec. 1, 1929, the Commerce Department announced. In that period there were 3,098 accidents, 1,122 of which occurred in 1929, 1,122 in 1928 and the remainder in 1927.

MANY SWEETS FOR AMERICA'S SWEETHEART.

Who is America's Sweetheart? A gray-haired woman, neither beautiful nor famous, has come to the fore in the last few years to claim this distinction. Her name is Mother, and she held the center of the stage on Sunday, May 11, which is now nationally observed as Mother's Day.

Proof that this title belongs to her is offered by the National Confectioners' Association which reports that gifts of candy for Mother's Day are more numerous and costly than for any other holiday except Christmas. Even Valentine's Day is less important. It is estimated that 4,000,000 pounds of sweets of all kinds are purchased and given to mothers on that one day alone.

These are not all old-fashioned peppermints or horehound drops, either. Mother's sweet tooth seems as catholic in its tastes as it is capacious. She likes chocolates of all kinds, the newest and most elaborate bonbons as well as the simpler candies. Fruit centers are high favorites; so are nuts and caramels and the chewy sweets.

The packages that fond sons and daughters are selecting are trimmed in ribbons and artificial flowers. Some bear old-fashioned silhouettes and others are gay with crimson and gold. Tender mottoes and fervent inscriptions assure the recipient of her child's undying devotion.

Mother, no doubt, is a popular person the world over. But America is the only country where on a certain anniversary she is showered with gifts of candy and flowers that bring back the days of her youth.

1134 HUNTERS LOSE LICENSE PRIVILEGE.

Since 1923 when the Board of Game Commissioners was first vested with power to revoke hunting licenses, such action has been taken in 1,134 cases, according to the last compilation made.

At present 380 revocations are still in effect. Of that number action was taken on July 11, 1929, in 299 cases, for periods of one or two years, according to the offense being punished.

The board has power to revoke hunter's licenses for one or two years after conviction of any game law violation, destroying personal property or crops, careless use of firearms or intoxication while carrying a loaded weapon.

Conviction for a second or subsequent offense permits the Commission to revoke licenses for not less than two years nor more than three.

BIG ANESTHESIA "PLANT."

St. Bartholomew's hospital, London, is spending $1,000,000 to put its patients to sleep. A central anesthetizing plant is being placed in a building at the rear of the hospital's operating department. When it is completed, surgeons will be able to "tap" anesthetic gases in any part of the department. The central plant will eliminate the necessity of carrying heavy cylinders of gas.
