Canvassers for the annual membership drive for the Centre County hospital report fair success so far and those in charge are hopeful that the drive will yield as good, if not better returns, than the one held a year ago. While the drive was supposed to last a week it has been impossible for the canvassers to cover all their territory in that time, and it will be continued until everybody has been seen. And even then some people may be overlooked, and if there are any missed they will be given proper credit by sending their contribution direct to the hospital.

A head-on collision occurred on the Bellefonte Central railroad, about four o'clock Wednesday afternoon, between the regular passenger train from State College and shifter engine, on the blind curve near the plant of the Chemical Lime company. The engineer, fireman and brakemen composing the shifting crew all jumped and escaped without injury, while no one on the passenger train was injured. One gondola car was badly wrecked and the shifting engine considerably damaged.

PHEASANT FINDS NEST AFTER FOREST FIRES.

Edmund D. Groff, a deputy game protector at Worthington, has reported to the Game Commission an instance which officials say indicate the extent to which a female pheasant will protect the eggs in its nest.

During a recent fire in Armstrong county Groff discovered a nest with eleven eggs directly in the path of advancing flames. Realizing that the flames could not be diverted Groff removed the entire nest, wrapping it in his vest and carrying it to safety. After the fire was extinguished Groff replaced the nest.

An examination the next day revealed the mother grouse contentedly settled on the eggs.

BELLEFONTE MAN PATENTS NON-GLARE HEADLIGHTS.

In the list of patents granted, last week, was one to J. B. Darlington, of Bellefonte, for a non-glare headlight for automobiles, trucks, etc. In speaking of his light invention to a Watchman reporter Mr. Darlington stated that his light has no beam and is made to meet the requirements of all drivers. It has many qualities that present lights do not have. It will make night driving a pleasure and should prevent many accidents now ascribed to glaring headlights.

The lights are frosted upon approach, light all objects in the road, do not reflect in the back of the car and have no blinding effect on the eyes. They light up a curve as you enter and leave it and give all necessary warning signals on the side of the road. The light is so perfect that a mirror held in front of it shows no reflection. Adjustment is very simple and the light can be focused with a range of ten feet up to five hundred, in front of a car.

There is a possibility that the light might be manufactured in Bellefonte, though Mr. Darlington has not yet committed himself definitely. He would like to have a plant located here but a number of other localities are bidding for it. He has also had offers for the purchase of his patent outright, but so far has made no decision.
