MAN WHO STOLE DEER MUST FACE SENTENCE.

Stealing a deer is just as much of a crime in the Centre county courts as any other form of larceny, if the man charged with the crime is convicted. While hunting in the Seven mountains, last December, Paul Stover of Penn township, had the carcase Races of various kinds were held of a nice buck stolen. Sending out a tracer he obtained information which led him to believe that the deer had been stolen by George Schaick, a hunter from up near Scranton. Information was made against Schaick and he was placed under arrest. He was tried at the May term of court, a bullet found in the carcass of the deer and the position of the bullet hole in the hide being the principal exhibits o. the Commonwealth which led to the man's conviction.

An application for a new trial wa: argued on July 7th and last weel Judge Fleming handed down a de cision in which he refused the ap plication and ordered Schaick to appear in court on Monday morning August 4th, for sentence.

Every hunting season deer are stolen by unscrupulous hunters fron the legal killers and more or les. interest attaches to the sentence that will be meted out in this case
