BELLEFONTE FISHERMEN

MAKE 150 POUND TALK.

Last week the Watchman told Dr. David Dale and Robert F. Hunter going to the Delaware bay for a few hours of fishing on Friday. On their way down, Thursday afternoon, they stopped at Harrisburg and took Bent Weaver along with them. The three of them went about twelve miles down the bay, early Friday morning, in a regular fishing boat and they were kept so busy pulling in croakers, sea trout and other species that they forgot to get sea-sick, notwithstanding the fact that the boat pitched and rolled on the swell of the waves. When they returned to shore and weighed their catch they discovered that they had caught 150 pounds of fish. As the fish averaged about two pounds each it meant in the neighborhood of 75 fish.

Last week Harry Weber, Harry Gross and Jimmie Townsend, of Phillipsburg, spent several days fishing on Delaware bay and returned with 300 pounds of fish, packed in ice, which they distributed among their friends.
